JAMES KENNEDY.
The Scottish

AND

American Poems

OF

JAMES KENNEDY

NEW YORK:
J. S. OGILVIE PUBLISHING COMPANY,
57 Rose Street.
OME, Muse of Scotland! spread thy wing
Like wild bird seaward journeying;
Leave thy loved land, to which belongs
The riches of thy matchless songs;
Come in thy splendor, fair and free,
Like morning o'er the shining sea!
I long to see thy beauteous face,
And mark thy wild and winsome grace;
And catch, perchance, some kindling thrill
Of that divine, impassioned skill
Which flamed into immortal fire,
When Coila's minstrel tuned the lyre,
And swept its thrilling chords along
In bursts of sweet, ecstatic song.

What though fair Scotland's hills and streams
I see not but in airy dreams;
Thy glowing presence aye shall be
A joyous all-in-all to me.
By thee, as by the green-robed Spring,
The wilds shall burst to blossoming,
And silent solitudes shall be
Awake with warbled melody.
By thee, as by a vision bright,
The vacant waste of viewless night
Shall open to my wondering eyes
The glowing earth, the azure skies,
The purple mountains crowned with mist,
Isles set in seas of amethyst.
And all the artless words and ways
That mark'd the course of earlier days,
Shall come revived on Fancy's wing
All bright in fond imaginings.
Nor shall we lack, as on we trip,
For gay and glad companionship;
For rosy Mirth, with beaming eyes,
Shall laugh at Folly's thin disguise;
While Truth's light, quenchless as a star,
Shines, beacon-like, where'er we are.
And thou, fair Virtue—crowning grace,
Sweet as the smile on Beauty's face—
O may the quenchless love of thee
Our master motive ever be!

While through and through each simple song,
The love of right, the hate of wrong,
Dwell with the hope that dimly sees
The dawn of broader sympathies:
Glow in the faith that faintly hears,
A far-off music in our ears,
When all the barriers that divide
The human race are swept aside,
And man with brother man shall be
Bless'd in a happy unity.

Then come, sweet spirit! Lend thy power.
Be near me in my dreaming hour!
Shed thou thy lustrous light around,
And all shall seem enchanted ground!
Inspire me and my verse shall be
A river shining to the sea!
That bears upon its bosom bright
A mirror'd world of life and light,
And adds to Nature's varied tone
A low, sweet music all its own.
CONTENTS.

THE HIGHLANDERS IN TENNESSEE.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Introduction</th>
<th>Part I. The March over the Cumberland Mountains</th>
<th>Part II. The Campaign in Eastern Tennessee</th>
<th>Part III. The Siege of Knoxville</th>
<th>Part IV. The Defense of Fort Sanders</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>9</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>19</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

MISCELLANEOUS.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>To the Humming Bird</th>
<th>To the Mosquitoes</th>
<th>Whisky's Awa'</th>
<th>Auld Scotia in the Field</th>
<th>Noran Water</th>
<th>Wee Charlie</th>
<th>To my Native Land</th>
<th>Angus Rankin's Elegy</th>
<th>St. Andrew and the Haggis</th>
<th>The Monk and the Spectre</th>
<th>Lament on the Departure of a British Poet</th>
<th>Elegy on the Death of a Scottish Athlete</th>
<th>To the Shade of Burns</th>
<th>The Songs of Scotland</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
CONTENTS.

The Refugees ....................................................... 71
The Two Brothers .............................................. 77
Among the Grampian Hills ........................................ 81
Among the Catskill Mountains .................................... 83
In Memoriam. J. C. M. ........................................... 85

SONGS.
The Bonnie Lass that's far Awa' .................................. 86
Cam' Ye Owe' the Fulton Ferry? ................................. 87
O Mary, Do Ye Mind the Day? ..................................... 88
Now Simmer Cleeds the Groves in Green ......................... 89
Mary wi' the Gowden Hair ......................................... 90
Bonnie Noranside .................................................. 91
Bonnie Jean ......................................................... 92
I Wonder if the Bonnie Laddie Thinks on Me .................... 93

LYRICAL CHARACTER SKETCHES.
The Anxious Mither ............................................... 95
The Lichtsome Lass ............................................... 97
The Auld-Farrant Carl ........................................... 99
The Witless Laddie ............................................... 101
The Hotel Keeper ............................................... 105
The Caledonian Chief ........................................... 108
The Lecturer ...................................................... 110
The Play-Actor ................................................... 113
The Peddler ....................................................... 116
The Inventor ...................................................... 118
The Curler ....................................................... 120
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CONTENTS.</th>
<th>PAGE</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Quoit Players.</td>
<td>123</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Piper</td>
<td>129</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Dandy Dancer</td>
<td>132</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Chieftain</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Blate Wooer</td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Suffering Citizen</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Match-Making Luckie</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Cavalier</td>
<td>143</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Minister-Daft</td>
<td>146</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Spiritualist</td>
<td>148</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Feast of MacTavish</td>
<td>153</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Western Waif</td>
<td>158</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Poacher</td>
<td>161</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Deeside Lass</td>
<td>165</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Mournfu’ Mither</td>
<td>167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Wife o’ Weinsberg</td>
<td>169</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Dominie and the Bethernal</td>
<td>172</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Americanized Scot</td>
<td>175</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Royal Scot</td>
<td>179</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Wanderer</td>
<td>183</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Notes</td>
<td>185</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Glossary</td>
<td>191</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
SCOTTISH AND AMERICAN POEMS.

THE HIGHLANDERS IN TENNESSEE.

"How sleep the brave, who sink to rest,
By all their country's wishes blest!"
—Collins.

INTRODUCTION.

How brightly through the vanish'd years
The light of Scotland's fame appears!
Now flashed through clouds that faintly mar,
Now glitt'ring, like the Polar star
That burns in Northern glory, bright
In inextinguishable light!

In Time's dim dawning when the world
Beheld Rome's banner broad unfurl'd
And Cæsar's legions proudly pass'd,
Fierce as the cyclone's leveling blast,
O'er lands where freemen battling brave
Bent 'neath the wild, resistless wave:
O Scotland, then thy stalwart race
Defied earth's conquerors face to face;
In vain the cohorts' fierce attack,
Thy brandish'd broadswords beat them back,
And Rome's proud legions learned to fear
Th' unconquered Caledonian spear.
But darker fate awaits the bands
Of Vikings from their Northern strands
Who, lured by conquest's golden smiles,
Swarm bird-like on the Scottish isles.
In vain Norwegian maidens weep
For lovers slain beyond the deep;
In vain the blazing beacons burn
For them who never more return;
In restless sobs the lonely waves
Sigh o'er their dark, unnoticed graves.

But brighter yet thy luster shone,
O Scotland! when thy Marathon
Beheld the bold invading host
Strewn like the flowers in early frost;
Thy crystal streams with blood ran red,
Thy green fields heaped with England's dead;
While Freedom's happy wings expand
Triumphant o'er thy war-worn land;
Whilst thou in Glory's sacred height
Becom'st a high set beacon light,
To which, when angry tempests lower,
And nations grope in Fate's dark hour,
Their streaming eyes shall northward turn
And think of thee and Bannockburn!

Nor less each lurid flash that shows
The wars of fratricidal foes;
The raids of lowland cavaliers,
The feuds of martial mountaineers,
The musket flash that vainly stays
The Covenanter's psalm of praise,
The blows of force by faith defied,
The gold of Truth in battle tried,
The radiant streaks that chase away
The shadows of a darker day.

These come, and through each age there runs,
From stalwart sires to stalwart sons,—
Deep set in an eternal youth,—
The same strong love of right and truth,
The lion heart, the iron hand,
That kept intact their native land,
Until her mountains seem to be
High monuments to liberty;
Her silv’ry waters flash along
And murmur into martial song,
Her storms that sweep the rustling dales
Bring echoes of heroic tales,
And ev’n the gray cloud-mantled glades
Seem haunted by heroic shades,
And all seem vocal with the sound
Of deeds that made them hallowed ground.

Nor there alone where Scotland stands
Enwreathed by Freedom’s loving hands
Has valor’s royal wreath been won;
But far and near, where’er the sun
Has shone on battle’s bold array,
On many a fierce and fateful day,
Have Lowland might and Highland zeal
Been writ in blood and carved with steel,
Till o’er the din of wild alarms
Had triumph crown’d their conquering arms.
Ev'n here, where Freedom's beacon light
Shines o'er Columbia broad and bright,
And gladden'd nations turn to see
The starry flag of Liberty,
Whose breezy folds in peace unfurl'd
Wave welcome to a wond'ring world:
When mad Disunion's threatening hand
Crept like a shadow o'er the land,
And hostile States in war's alarms
Rang with the clarion call to arms;
Then, mustered with the loyal North,
A thousand Scots went bravely forth;
The flash of Freedom in their eyes,
And, fierce and wild as battle cries,
The war songs of their native land
Were echoed by the gallant band
In days of battle and of toil
O'er fair Virginia's war-worn soil;
Or roused to life the listless camps
By Carolina's dreary swamps;
Or rose serene in triumph grand
Among the hills of Maryland;
And oft inspired the martial ranks
By Mississippi's reedy banks;
And swelled the anthems of the free
Among the vales of Tennessee.

By tangled brake and spreading plain,
In many a hard and wild campaign;
O'er trampled fields where grass grew red
Beside the grim and ghastly dead,
They met and fought the gallant South
Unwavering to the cannon's mouth;
Such feats as graced these years along
Were fitting for heroic song;—
For Poesy's highest aim should be
To sing of Love and Liberty;
The love that through obstruction tries
To blossom into sacrifice:
The love that burns till life expires,
With soul aflame, like altar fires.
Their was the high heroic zeal,
The noble love that patriots feel.
Who see beyond the present strife
The paths that lead to nobler life:
Who feel the fiery blast that brings
The truth, like gold, from grosser things;
And know however dark the sky
The stars still shine serene on high.

And theirs the cause that strongly stood
Alone for human brotherhood;
They fought that Freedom might not seem
To be but as an airy dream;
Their manly hearts and hands maintained
The peace the Puritans had gained;
They fought earth's fairest land to save,
And all men had to give they gave
That their adopted land might be United still from sea to sea.

Their task is done—our land receives
The ripe reward—the golden sheaves
Of Peace that gladdens happy hours,
And Freedom garlanded with flowers.
Their honored lives ennobled need
No trumpet blast to tell each deed.
One flag, one people, and one land
Their monuments united stand.

But oft these martial scenes return,
In mem'ry's eye the camp fires burn;
In day-dreams oft unbidden come
The bugle call, the roll of drum,
The gleam of steel, the grand parade,
The musket flash, the cannonade,
The rallying cheer, the ringing shout,
The charge terrific and the rout,
The onward march till—perils past,
The healing calm of Peace at last.

Thus may the tuneful Muse rehearse
One brief campaign in simple verse,
And tell how, wreath'd in fire and smoke,
God's voice in battle thunder spoke.
And taught those truths more dearly prized
That are by blood and tears baptized,
And oft reverberate sublime
Along each echoing arch of time.

PART I.

THE MARCH OVER THE CUMBERLAND MOUNTAINS.

Where Cumberland's green mountains rise
'Neath fair Kentucky's opal skies,
The hazy mist hangs ghostly white
Around each leafy covered height,
And veils the silent solitudes
Of frowning crags and solemn woods;
The towering peaks are dimly seen
Like islands looming darkly green;
But now the eastern headland’s fringe
Is touched as by a fiery tinge,
And, flash’d twixt headlands far away,
The first glad gleam of dawning day
Illumes the hills of somber hue
With sudden gleams of sparkling dew;
Each tender leaflet seems afire,
Each springing spike a burnished spire,
Each bending bough, with dewdrops wet,
Seems now with silver spangles set;
And mark the varied hues that rise,
Bewildering in their dazzling dyes,
Till shrub and tree, like flow’rets, show
Fair fragments of the rainbows glow
Some clad in scarlet rich and rare,
Glow bright as watch fires here and there,
Some gayly deck’d in garnish’d gold
Their yellow wealth of leaves unfold;
There as by fairy fingers swung,
The wavy fringework tassel-hung
Links bough to bough till, grandly graced,
Tree, shrub and flower are interlaced,
And all above, around, beneath,
Is one vast variegated wreath.
Fair flow’rets, Nature’s brightest gems;
Gleam star-like on their glossy stems,
The cluster’d fruit shines overhead
Rich as at royal banquet spread;
Sweet echoes catch the warbled notes
That gush from song-birds’ mellow throats;
The fragrant incense of the morn
Steals on the sense by soft winds borne;
Aloft the burnish'd broad expanse
Of sapphire meets the upward glance,
Like seas by sunlit glory seen,
Far spread, resplendent and serene.

O Nature! in thy lovely moods,
Deep hid in sylvan solitudes,
How meet that Peace supremely blest
In calm content with thee should rest!
How distant seem the cares, the strife,
The ills that haunt frail human life!
How far remote seems war's red flood,
The sickening sight of human blood!
Thou in thy God-like splendor set,
Art free from care and dull regret.
No sorrow dims thy radiant eyes,
No longings vex thy soul with sighs;
Thou holdest thy unswerving course,
Still strong as from thy primal source
Thou, clad in majesty serene,
Enrob'st the earth in shining green!
What carest thou though near thy throne
Amid these mountains wild and lone,
With blare of trump and beat of drum,
The long embattled columns come?
While o'er the flower-enamed knolls
The brazen cannon rudely rolls;
And echoing far by woody ways
The foam-fleck'd war-horse wildly neighs;
While lumbering on in slow advance
The heavy-laden ambulance
Comes dust-enwrapped as in a cloud
And sorrow-freighted as a shroud.

Yet, sooth, it is a gallant sight
To mark as on from height to height
The moving squadrons, now revealed,
And now by leafy shades concealed,
March bravely onward, while the gleam
Of arms are glittering as a stream,
That ever ceaseless in its flow,
Goes flashing to the vale below.
No garish pomp or grand display,
That marks a civic holiday
With gorgeous show of bold pretence,
But resolute intelligence
Along the martial ranks is seen,
In sober manhood’s modest mien.

There with the far-assembled host,
The Scots lead on in honor’s post.
See how they gaze in glad surprise
As through fond memory’s dreamy eyes
The scenes their happy boyhoods knew
In Scotland’s Highlands rise to view!
To them that towering peak is now
The bold Ben Lomond’s lofty brow,
Or high Schiehallion’s rugged height,
Though tears bedim the gladsome sight.
What though fair Scotland’s hills ne’er knew
Such glowing tints of rainbow hue;
In Fancy’s eye the vanish’d years
Of golden youth such glory wears,
That all the iridescent sheen
Of intermingled gold and green
That gilds the mountains of the West
Is dim beside each purple crest
That looms in cloudless splendor high,
Transfigured bright in memory's eye.

Beside them in the ranks of war
Are men whose homes are distant far:
In cities, where the morning laves
Her beams among the Atlantic waves,
By fair New England's breezy dales,
Or Pennsylvania's happy vales;
And men whose feet in peace had press'd
The broad, green prairies of the West
Are there, by one bright hope inspired,
By Liberty to valor fired.
Two weary years of battle's chance
And war's uncertain circumstance,
Had fail'd to quench the fiery zeal
That flamed within their hearts of steel.
Time's changing touch had barely cooled
The hearts in hard experience schooled,
Though less of ardor's gallant show
Shone through the silent soul below,
As rivers flowing fast and free
Grow calmer as they near the sea.

March on, brave soldiers! yours the cause
That looks not for the loud applause
That greets the victor of the hour;
Your prize is right's unfading flower
That springs from Virtue's fruitful seeds,
And blossoms into noble deeds.
Your feet are hastening on the path
That leads where Wrong poured forth her wrath,
Because fair Tennessee abhorred
To draw Rebellion's ruthless sword.
Strong in her faith and tried her worth
She stands unaltering with the North,
And through long hours of sorrow drawn
She waiteth for the golden dawn.
She knows the battles you have fought,
The triumphs which your arms have wrought.
Your march is music to her ears,
She hails your coming on with cheers
That echo joyous, far and free,
In every vale of Tennessee.

PART II.

THE CAMPAIGN IN EASTERN TENNESSEE.

They who have seen the sad, pale trace
Of sorrow on the wasted face,
When slow disease had worn away
Fair beauty's bloom to dull decay;
And mark'd the first returning gleam
Of health that, bright as morning's beam,
Which tinges with ethereal light
The gloomy shadows of the night;
And saw how sweetly, calmly fair
Hope came and dwelt serenely there,
Has seen such trace of light and shade
As rapine's ruthless hand had made,
When Hope exultant rose at last
Triumphant o'er the woeful past
And spoke of Peace that was to be Again supreme in Tennessee.

There roofless stands in dark decay
The happy homes of yesterday;
The loyal hands are gone that made
Their dwellings 'neath the maple's shade;
The prowling fox and wild raccoon
Dwell by the lonely hearths at noon;
Uncropt the flowers whose rainbow dyes
Glow bright as beauty's radiant eyes,
Unheeded by deserted walks
They wane and wither on their stalks;
Untouched the fruit bestrews the sod,
By happy toiler's feet untrod.
Yon blacken'd waste with ashes strewn,
Tells where the waving grain had grown
Till rude Rebellion's scorching flame
Had blasted earth where'er it came.
Yon crumbling pile beside the flood
Shows where the spanning arch had stood;
And far and near on ev'ry hand
Had havoc marr'd the lovely land
Whose beauties breath'd but of distress
In sad, forsaken loneliness.

The scene is changed. Along the height
The soldiers see another sight:
The sheen of steel, the lurid glare
Of fire that rends the sulph'rous air;—
The shrieking shells that wrathful fly
Far-circling through the startled sky,
While loud and fast the cannons boom
Their thunders in the gathering gloom!
Unfurl the starry flag and march
Erect, as if yon fiery arch
Was but some fair triumphal show
That graced a happy scene below.
Ye gallant men whose stalwart sires
First lit bold Freedom's quenchless fires
In fair New England's broad domains;
Ye freemen from the Western plains,
Ye Pennsylvanians tried and true,
The Roundheads' blood that throbs in you
Is stirred with all its wonted life
When Freedom calls to armed strife!
Mark where along yon wooded height
The Scots rush headlong to the fight;
A fierce, insatiable fury whets
Their bristling line of bayonets!
Already as, like fire, they go
Resistless on th' astonished foe,
A nameless terror wildly starts
A panic in the foemen's hearts.
Charge boldly on their wavering lines!
Charge while yon sun resplendent shines!
His parting smile, ere comes the night,
Dwells like a halo round the height,
And lends the splendors of the sky
To gild the Union victory!

Onward the victors march nor pause
To count each fight in Freedom's cause;
They feel no pride in fields like these,
No charm in vict'ries won with ease.
But, bright as sunbeams through a cloud,
Joy wakes the echoes long and loud;
Each nestling hamlet seems to wake
To brighter life, and gladly make Triumphant wreaths to grace the way
In one long, happy holiday.
Cheers rend the air; glad bells are rung;
Warm welcomes swell from every tongue.
The teeming towns send forth their throngs,
That fill the air with martial songs;
While music, with its warbled sweets,
Makes gay the march by crowded streets,
And brings to mem’ry’s longing ear
Strains that the wanderer loves to hear;—
Fond echoes from the far-off Rhine
Come soft as zephyrs, warm as wine;
Blythe airs that lead the merry dance
Among the vine-clad hills of France
Are there, and sweetly, nobly grand
The music of my native land
Comes wild and high as vict’ries’ cheers—
The echoes of a thousand years!

Bright days are these and happy nights
Made glad by Nature’s calm delights:
The gorgeous glow of autumn woods,
The peace of sylvan solitudes,
The marchings in the golden noon,
The bivouacs ’neath the silver moon,
The civic joy, the social grace,
The sunshine of the human face,
These, dream-like, pass in bright surprise,
Before the soldier’s wondering eyes,
And form, in life’s beclouded sky,
A golden gleam in memory’s eye.
The dream is past. The waning year
Has brought November dull and drear.
The loyal North's victorious ranks
Rest on their arms by Holston's banks,
And dream that Eastern Tennessee
From ruthless rebel hordes is free.
By day their sheltering huts they raise;
By night beside the camp-fire's blaze
They pass the merry jest and song,
The careless, happy groups among;
And war's wild ways already seem
Dim as a half-forgotten dream.

'Tis midnight, and the slumb'ring camp
Is still as death—the muffled tramp
Of cautious foemen clustering near
Falls faintly on the sentry's ear;
His rifle speaks—the foeman comes!
Roll out, ye army-rousing drums!
Ye bugles blare your wild alarms!
Haste, haste, ye loyal men to arms!
See by the camp-fire's wavering glare
The loyal ramrods spring in air!
While bright as dewdrops on the heath
Are bayonets flashing from the sheath!
In vain your serried lines ye brave,
Back—back—nor meet yon mighty wave
That comes in overwhelming force,
Far spread in its resistless course.
Back—'neath the black wings of the night
The Scots shall hold yon friendly height
Till, from the baffled foe withdrawn,
The dim eyes of the doubtful dawn
Shall see your brazen batteries crown.
The forts encircling Knoxville town.

---

PART III.

THE SIEGE OF KNOXVILLE.

The dark November sky droops down
Like funeral wreaths on Knoxville town,
The Holston River steals along;
Harsh, mournful murmurs mar its song,
Its hurrying tide brooks no delay,
Like one that hastes to be away;
The hollow winds in eddies meet,
And, rustling on the lonely street,
The raindrops borne on whirling wings
Sweep through the air like living things,
Or earthward rattle, tempest driven,
As' twere the volleyed wrath of Heaven.

Pale faces set in startled stare
Show in the casements here and there;
Dumb wonder waits in anxious eyes,
And fear dwells mute in sad surprise;
And well they might, for near and far,
Above the elemental war,
The cannons crash with thundering boom,
And lurid flashes light the gloom;
While through the sulphurous air the flight
Of shrieking shells appalls the sight,
Then, bursting on the riven ground,
They spread new horror all around;
Each hillside near the startled town
With brazen batteries seems to frown;
Each rocky cliff its front has lent
For bastioned tower and battlement;
The leafy vales where late the flowers
In beauty bloomed in golden hours,
The breath of battle seems to feel
And blossom into blades of steel;
And where the wild birds sweet and gay
Sang many a warbled roundelay,
Now rings the rifle loud and clear,
Incessant on the startled ear.
But mark where through the tempest shines
The nearer trace of Union lines,
There loyal hands have trenches made
And ply the busy pick and spade;
There the keen ax has felled the trees
And skillful shaped the arrowy frieze;
There cautious care has spread her plans
In firm redoubts and bold redans;
There breastworks rise and palisade
And widening embrasures are made,
Through which the level'd cannon show Their mouths toward th' approaching foe.

The lines are thin for miles along,
The arms are but three thousand strong;
But stout in nature's best defense,
They stand in manly confidence;
From river bank to heights around
There lies no unprotected ground;
No vantage place an opening spreads
But where the cannon enfilades,
And where the western works extend,
O'er rising slopes and northward bend,
There on the frowning angle, crown'd
With crested ramparts guarded round,
While ample ditch its width expands,
A double-bastioned fortress stands.
And silent sentinels, night and day,
Watch the long, weary hours away;
Keen-eyed each soldier keeps his post
And waits the fierce, rebellious host.
Within, unwavering as a rock,
The Scots await the battle-shock;
O'erhead the starry banner streams,
Around the burnish'd bayonet gleams;
The distant bursts of smoke and flame
Are but as passing breeze to them;
The bomb flies past on rushing wings
Unheeded as familiar things;
The foemen's fire, the gleam of swords,
Are less to them than idle words;
Like runners at the starting place
They wait impatient for the race;
Before them, lit by memory's lamp,
Comes James' Island's ghastly swamp,
Where, grim before the batteries' breath,
Their comrades strewed that field of death;
And vengeance with a fierce desire
Is burning in their eyes of fire,
And hope proclaims th' approaching day
That wipes that bloody stain away.

But weary nights and direful days
Tempestuous pass their fiery ways;
Each morn the weak-eyed sickly sun
Beholds the fight again begun;
While near, in ever-narrowing ring,
The fiery Southrons closer cling.
Each day adds horrors to the storm
That gathers round War's wasting form;
Each night reveals in lurid glare
Red ruin rend the startled air:
While from the clouds the deluge keeps
Unceasing as if heaven weeps,
Till underneath the trampled grass
The earth is one black, yielding mass.
Nor tent nor shelter there is found;
The scowling skies, the seething ground,
And, ghastly as a funeral pyre,
The nearing arc of ceaseless fire
That wings in blasts of sulphurous breath
The swift-winged whizzing bolts of death.
Then famine, too, with pallid streak
Begins to mark the wasted cheek,
And hollow eye that pensive waits
Submissive to the frowning fates;
For, uncomplaining of their lot,
In silence waits each stalwart Scot;
Like cliffs that guard their native land,
Around the fateful fort they stand,
While heaven and earth is, near and far,
Convulsed in one fierce blast of war.

At last o'erhead th' ethereal blue
Clear as the eye of Heaven shines through,
And Winter makes the earth his throne,
And binds his glitt'ring armor on;
Before him, spectral-like and gaunt,
The waters change to adamant;
Trees glow in crystal branches bright,
Shrubs spread in flashing frostwork white,
Earth sparkles, o'er her marble face
A wreath-of rich embroider'd lace
In silvery fringework flames as free
As sunshine on a summer sea.
The guns are hushed. The air is still.
The watch-fires gleam along the hill;
Serene the radiant moon looks down
Like Pity's eye on Knoxville town;
The stars in spangling splendor bright
Illume the calm, broad brow of night;
Aloft while they their vigils keep
The wearied soldiers sink to sleep,
And fairer, fonder scenes arise
In beauty to their dreaming eyes;
Home steals around them and the charms
Of social joy their life-blood warms;
The want, the woe of war's wild days,
Is quenched in dreamland's magic maze;
Nor winter's frown, nor war's fierce power
Can rob them of this golden hour.
Sweet be your dreams as o'er each brow
Bright memories weave fair fancies now!
Peace fold you in her gentle wing
With joy beyond imagining,
Till happy thrills of gladness bless
The calm of sweet forgetfulness!
Dream not that ere to-morrow's sun
His westward, golden race has run,
Hundreds of gallant hearts shall lie
Cold as the clay 'neath winter's sky!
Dream on, for ere yon stars shall fade
In light by dawning splendor made,
The furious fires of war shall glow
In lurid lightning wrath below;
And foemen, woke to frenzied strife;
Rush in the bloom of sweet young life
To death's dull mystery dark and deep,—
That last, that long and dreamless sleep!

PART IV.

THE DEFENSE OF FORT SANDERS.

One flash that dims the stars' pale light,
One crash that rends the ear of night,
One shell that shrieks in fiendish sport,
Then bursts exultant near the fort!
One bugle-call whose warbled sound
Brings answering blasts from miles around;
Then all at once thestartled air
Is quivering with a fitful glare,
That, quick as northern meteor runs,
Of fire on fire from answering guns
That belch their fury harsh and grim
Along the dark horizon's rim;
While thick as hail in summer skies
An iron shower tempestuous flies.
And striking, bursts in awful light
Around the fort's embattled height.
Blow strikes on blow, like steel on steel,
Till all the riven ramparts reel,
As if the forms of fort and plain
Were crumbling into dust again.

They pause—the Southern cannoneers—
And now—with ringing yells and cheers,
Dim as a cloud they form, and then
A torrent of ten thousand men
Comes onward in a threatening roar,
As some wild wave that seeks the shore,
Or some dark tempest gathering round;
Earth trembles at the awful sound;
The gray gloom glistens ghastly bright,
As glimmering in the shadowy light,
The bayonets gleam against the moon,
Thick as the fireflies flash in June.
On, on they come, as when the hills
Are furrowed by a thousand rills,
And fast the rushing waters flow
Impetuous to the vale below;
Where wild and wide they clear a path,
Uncheck'd in overflowing wrath,
Till some bold cliff whose summits show
Defiance to the waves below;
There when the warring waters meet
They pause and tremble at its feet.

Fierce from the fort the cannons crash,
Fast, fast three hundred rifles flash;
Heedless and hurrying squadrons pour
In headlong haste their maddening roar;
The frenzy spreads, the fury grows;
The ditch is filled and overflows.
Up the steep slope the tide is press’d,
The flags are planted on the crest;
Steel gleams on steel, eye glares on eye,
Shouts, yells commingled rend the sky;
Supreme the wave triumphant seems,
Aloft its crest victorious gleams.
Splendid it rises in its might
Above the flashing, bristling height,
And tremulous hangs as poised in air
It dwells but for a moment there;
Backward it rolls as ocean’s waves
Against some headland vainly raves.
Backward, pierced through by shot or steel,
The fiery Southrons downward reel;
Again the war-worn crest is clear;
Loud rings the Scot’s ecstatic cheer.

But louder yet the answering yell
Of furious foes the tumult swell;
Again they charge, a fierce, fresh flood,
Up the red ramparts wet with blood;
All the wild wrath of hate they bring;
Grim as the grasp of death they cling;
Mass’d on the angle see them swarm
As wild beasts roused by fierce alarm.
Throw the death-dealing grenades there;
Fire the keen rifle till the air
In thunders hush the dying cry
Of gallant men who bravely die.
Rush to the crest, ye stalwart few,
God’s mighty arm shall strike with you!
Dash down the foremost in the fray,
Stand fast and keep the hosts at bay;
THE HIGHLANDERS IN TENNESSEE.

There let them quench their Southern zeal
On bristling blades of Northern steel!
Quick from their desp’rate hands unclasp
The flags they hold with iron grasp;
The stars and stripes alone shall be,
Above that fortress of the free!

The red blood freezes on the slope,
From dying hands the muskets drop;
Beneath—the ditch yawns deep and wide
Where comrades welter side by side;
Friends trample o’er them but in vain;—
Down headlong in the ditch again
They fall and swell the dying throng,
Bombs burst the bleeding mass among;
O’er the deep groans of dark despair
Shrieks wildly pierce the clamorous air;
Aloft their bravest and their best
Meet death in battle on the crest,
While ceaseless from the mass o’erhead
Drop down the dying and the dead,
Till heaped the grave grows ghastly grim
With dead uncoffin’d to the brim!

Dim dawn awakes and shadowy light
Glides ghost-like round th’ embattled height;
The glow of Orient flame shines through
The sulphurous clouds of mantling blue,
And gilds the gloom and glorifies
The fading light of dying eyes,
Transfiguring with a radiant grace
The pathos of each pallid face.
Sweet, tender, tear-eyed Pity seems
Blent with the morning's golden beams;
And war's fierce front has gentler grown,
Or with the doubtful darkness flown.
The battle ceases and the dawn
Beholds the shatter'd host withdrawn;
Where grim war's fiercest bolts were hurl'd
Behold the flags of truce unfurled;
The living, charging mass is gone,
The drifts of dead are there alone.

In stricken silence, sick at heart,
The shattered Southrons now depart.
No need is there, though wing'd in haste,
Grant's conquering legions of the West,
From Chattanooga's battleground
They come victorious, laurel-crowned.
But halt! roll east like prairie fires,
Virginia's fields your flame requires,
The cleansing fires from which shall spring
The future's fulness blossoming.
Come not where peace hath now returned,
Where war's fierce furnace fires have burn'd
Till purified, fair Freedom's voice
Makes Tennessee's glad vales rejoice.
Her trampled fields will bloom again
With happy wealth of golden grain;
In nestling towns war's clangors cease
And rises now the songs of Peace.

And thou, my own heroic band,
Bold warriors of my native land,
Haste where the Northern armies press
Through green Virginia's wilderness;
Close round where madly, blindly gropes
Rebellion's last, expiring hopes;
There grasp once more the war-worn hands
Where victors and the vanquished stands
In Peace and Unity again
On Appomattox' glorious plain.

And thou, ennobled Scottish dead,
Light lie the turf on each low head!
Whether thou sleep'st thy sleep serene
In graves by loving hands kept green,
Or liest unhonored and unknown
In lonely wilds by weeds overgrown,
Thy life, thy worth in battle tried,
Has made each grave seem sanctified!
Earth clasp thee to her silent breast!
Calm in her bosom may'st thou rest:
Thy blood by faith's baptismal grace
Bedewed, like heart-wrung tears, her face;
There when the gentle hand of spring
Her em'rald wreath shall blithely bring
There let the fairest flow'rets bloom
Above, around each hallowed tomb,
Her voices murmuring your knell,
The morning cometh—All is well!
MISCELLANEOUS.

Veritatis simplex oratio est.

TO THE HUMMING BIRD

RAW birdie, when in brambly howes,
Whaur mony a buss entangled grows,
And bonnie flow'rs in beauty spring,
I've seen thee fauld thy quivering wing.
While rapt I stood, amazed to see
The glowing hues that gleamed on thee—
The red, the blue, the gowd, the green,
The pearly gloss, the siller sheen;
Then quick, ere yet the eager eye
Had half perceived each dazzling dye,
Awa' ye fluttered frae the sight,
Like fire-flaucht in the cloud o' night.

Sic like 's when in the day's dull thrang
Time drags the weary hours alang;
Bright fancy flashes on the mind
Some bonnie blink o' wondrous kind—
Wild glens wi' burnies bick'rin doun,
Far frae the stoury, noisy toun;
Green woods an' sweet secluded dells,
Whaur silence aye serenely dwells;
Fond faces—rare auld warks an' ways
That graced the light o' ither days—
Come sudden on th' enraptured view,
Then vanish in a blink—like you.

But speed thee on thy fairy flight,
Whaur sweetest blossoms tempt thy sight;
An' round thee may ilk gladsome thing
Light as the flaffer o' thy wing
Aye keep thee blythe, nor aught e'er mar
The bonnie, braw, wee thing ye are.
Owerjoyed am I when happy chance
But brings thee in a passing glance.

Thus come, O Poesy! grace divine!
Come wi' that kindling fire o' thine,
That lends the dull imaginings
The beauties of a thousand things;
And though thy flashing fancies flit,
Like this wee birdie's restless fit,
Thy briefest glint shall grandly glow
As bright as Iris' radiant bow.
TO THE MOSQUITOES.

LANG-NEBBIT, bizzin', bitin' wretches,
That fire my skin wi' blobs an' splatches;
Till vex'd wi' yeukie claws an' scratches,
I think I'm free
Ta say the warld has seen few matches
To Job an' me.

Sae aft you've gar't me fret a' fume,
My vera spirit ye consume
Wi' everlasting martyrdom—
Ye wicked tartars,
You've surely settled on my room
For your headquarters!

Asleep or wauken, air or late,
Like Nick himsel' ye are na blate;
But like the doom o' pendin' fate
Aboon my head,
Ye keep me in a waefu' state
O' quakin' dread.

Whiles like a fury I've been stan' in',
An' clos'd my mou to keep frae bannin',
Whiles some destructive scheme I'm plannin'
Your race to scatter—
Oh, could I ram ye in a cannon,
An' then lat blatter!
When pensive in my fav'rite neuk,
I glow'r owre some auld-farrant beuk,
Like leeches then my bluid ye sook,
   Then bizz and flee;
An' then begins th' infernal yeuk
   That angers me.

When lost in mazy contemplation
And soars supreme imagination,
How aft on fancy's fair creation
   The curtain draps;
Ye bizz, an' blinks o' inspiration
   At ance collapse!

O, would some towsie-headed tyke,
Wha strives to make some new bit fyke,
Invent a plan to sweep your byke
   Frae human dwellins,
I'd sing his praise as heigh's ye like
   In braw, braid ballan's.

But fix'd ye are 'mang human ills—
Whose bitter cup your bitin' fills;
Nor auld wives' cures nor doctors' bills
   Can mend the case—
Firm as the everlasting hills
   Ye keep your place.

But could I gain some grace or ither,
To teach me in ilk warslin swither,
To tak the guid an' ill thegither
   Without complaint,
Then might we dwell wi' ane anither
   In calm content.
TO THE MOSQUITOES.

But sae it is—ye maun hae food,
An' I maun guard my ain heart's bluid;
But could ye scrape a livelihood
Some ither where,
I would be yours in gratitude
For evermair.
WHISKY'S AWA'!

WHAT news is this? I speer fu' fain,
Is this some joke o' th' printer's ain?
Na, faith, it's truth that he's been say'n':
They've pass'd a law
Through Pennsylvania, dale an' plain—
Whisky's awa'!

Weel might a pride light ilka eye,
An' ilk ane haud their head fu' high,
An' celebrate their Fourth July
Wi' mirth an' a',
An' roar o' cannon rend the sky—
Whisky's awa'!

Lang has it been your pridefu' boast,
What time the tyrant British host
Departed, like a frightened ghost,
At Freedom's craw;
A deadlier fae has left your coast—
Whisky's awa'!

Nae mair the drunkard's raggit bairns,
Like misers, live on scraps an' parin's,
An' gloomy jails, whase rusty airns
Fulfill the law,
May tumble down in shapeless cairns—
Whisky's awa'!
Good Templars now, an' bad anes baith,
May cast aside their glitt'rin' graith;
Nor need they paint vile whisky's scaith
    As black's a craw,
Nor sign the pledge, nor tak the aith—
    Whisky's awa'!

Rejoice ilk mither—sorrow now
Need never cloud your anxious brow.
Ye lasses, when ye mak' your vow,
    Let hopes ne'er fa'—
Your lads, like steel, will aye stand true—
    Whisky's awa'!

If sultry weather should prevail,
To slocken drouth nae ane need fail:
There's caller cronk an' ginger ale,
    Or, best o' a',
In Susquehanna dip your pail—
    'Whisky's awa'!

O caller water! gowd or gear
Compared wi' thee maun tak' the rear;
Thou never garr'd the bitter tear
    O' mis'ry fa'!
Pure be thy fountain evermair—
    Whisky's awa'!

Now Peace, wi' Plenty on its wing,
Contentment's sweets may swiftly bring,
An' Truth stand up, an' Virtue spring
    As pure as snaw!
While Universal Joy doth sing,
    Whisky's awa'!
AULD SCOTIA IN THE FIELD.

T WAS summer, and green earth's fair face
Was wreathed in vernal bloom;
Each dewy flow'ret lent its grace
And shed its sweet perfume.

The bright birds in the shady groves,
On ev'ry bush and tree,
Sang sweetly to their list'ning loves
Their songs of melody.

And from the city's busy throng
Went forth a joyous band,
To swell the universal song
That echoed through the land.

And deep within a shady wood
Joy held its sylvan court;
And thither thronged the multitude
To witness manly sport.

Again we joyed to sally forth
In tartan's plumed array;
Wild music of our native North,
Inspiring, led the way;

And Scottish banners waved above
The heads of Scottish men,
As if the Pennsylvanian grove
Were Caledonian glen.
Nor wanted there as brawny arms
As erst in days of yore
Were nobly raised in war's alarms
For old green Albyn's shore,

And won that glory which has given
A halo brightly thrown
Around her as a gleam from heaven—
A glory all her own.

And mem'ries thronged till bright there seem'd
Beneath fair Freedom's sun—
Columbia's—Scotia's luster gleam'd,
And spread their lights in one.

Thus ever may they seem to shine,
Homes of the brave and free,
Upholding manhood's right divine
Of God-like liberty;

And buoyant on the wings of fame,
Till Nature's destined plan
In thunder voices loud proclaim
The brotherhood of man.
NORAN WATER.

"Yet wheresoe’er his step might be,
Thy wandering child look’d back to thee!"
—Whittier.

STOOD where Erie’s waters flow
O’er steep Niag’ra’s awful brink,
And watch’d where to the depths below
The mighty torrents fold and sink;
And as my senses seemed to swim,
And quicker beat my throbbing heart,
The sounding waters sang their hymn,
More grand than music’s measured art.

And I have sailed upon the flood
That laves Manhattan’s busy shore,
By tangled brake and dark-green wood,—
By beetling crags moss-grown and hoar,—
By cultured fields where graceful bends
The maize’s yellow-crested stalk;
And where, to swell her tide, descends
The waters of the dark Mohawk.

And I have gazed with joy untold
Where through Wyoming’s valley green
The noble Susquehanna roll’d
In stately majesty serene;
While pure as that unclouded day,
Far seen in azure skies profound,
The magic of a poet’s lay
Made all the scene seem hallowed ground.
But these, though happy thoughts they bring,
   When clear upon the memory’s eye
They glow in bright imagining
   As vivid as reality;
Yet dearer memories fondly forth
   Come linked with Noran’s crystal stream,
That, bright as in its native North,
   Oft sparkles in my fancy’s dream.

O Noran! how I see thee dance
   By heath-clad hills alone, unseen,
Save where the lonely eagle’s glance
   Surveys thee from his crag serene.
Forever joyous thou dost seem,
   Still sportive as a child at play,
Who, lost in pleasure’s careless dream,
   Makes merry music all the day.

By fairy nooks I see thee flow,
   Nor pausing in thy artless song
Till where the fir trees spreading low
   Obscure thy stream their arms among.
There, sweet amid the shady gloom,
   Thou hear’st the blackbird chant his lay,
Thou see’st the pale primroses bloom,
   And silent ling’rest on thy way!

Then forth thy waters dazzling come
   Where sweet-brier scents the balmy breeze,
And where the wild bees softly hum
   Faint echo of thy harmonies.
Green spiky gorse thy banks adorn,
   Gold-tassel’d broom thy fringe-work weave,
While feathered choirs from dewy morn
   Make melody till dewy eve.
Then, foaming in fantastic flakes
    Thou dashest down a deep ravine,
Where overhanging wildwood makes
    A canopy of leafy green.
While sweet as when cathedral naves
    Are filled with voices grave and gay,
Soft echoes from their hidden caves
    Repeat thy ringing roundelay.

Then eddying deep by flowery dells,
    Or babbling on by clovery lea,
Thou glittering glid'st, while crystal bells
    Of diamond luster dance on thee,
And happy children's eager eye
    Pursues them, or with tiny hands
Collect the pearly shells that lie
    Begemming bright thy silvery sands.

Then on by pleasant farms that breathe
    Of calm contentment's happy clime;
Or laughing where the ivy's wreath
    Clings round the ruins of olden time.
And on where stately mansions rise,
    Or lowly gleams the cottage hearth;
Unchanged thy smile still meets the skies,
    Unchanged still rings thy song of mirth.

Till like a maid whose bridal morn
    Beholds her decked to meet her love,
Thou com'st where gayest flowers adorn,
    And sweetest warblers charm the grove;
And mingling with the Esk's clear stream,
    In fond embrace he claspeth thee,
And smiling 'neath the sunny beam,
    Rolls grandly to the German Sea.
NORAN WATER.

O Noran! bright thy memory brings
My careless boyhood back to me,
When ardent hope on fancy's wings
Beheld life's future gleam like thee.
But though life's path be dull and strange,
And rare the promised joys I meet,
In thee I have, through time and change,
One golden memory ever sweet!

O Noran! bright thy memory brings
My careless boyhood back to me,
When ardent hope on fancy's wings
Beheld life's future gleam like thee.
But though life's path be dull and strange,
And rare the promised joys I meet,
In thee I have, through time and change,
One golden memory ever sweet!
"I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me."—II Samuel, xii, 23.

GIN my heart could hae its wiss
Within this weary warld o' care,
I'd ask nae glow o' balmy bliss
To dwell around me evermair.
For joy were mine beyond compare,
An' O how happy would I be,
If Heaven would grant my earnest prayer,
An' bring wee Charlie back to me.

He cam' like sunshine when the buds
Burst into blossoms sweet and gay,
He dwelt like sunshine when the cluds
Are vanish'd frae the eye o' day.
He passed as daylight fades away,
An' darkness spreads ower land an' sea:
Nae wonder though in grief I pray,
O, bring wee Charlie back to me.

When Pleasure brings her hollow joys,
Or Mirth awakes at Friendship's ca',
Or Art her varied power employs
To mak' dull Time look blithe an' braw,
How feckless seem they ane an' a'
When sad Remembrance dims my e'e,—
O, tak' thae idle joys awa'
An' bring wee Charlie back to me.
But vain's the cry; he maunna cross
  Frae where he dwells in bliss unseen,
Nor need I mourn my waefu' loss,
  Nor muse on joys that might hae been.
When cauld death comes to close my een,
  Awa' beyond life's troublous sea,
In everlasting joy serene,
  They'll bring wee Charlie back to me.
TO MY NATIVE LAND.

ALEDONIA!—brightest, rarest
Gem that shin’st on earth or sea;
Lover-like, forever fairest
Fancy paints thy charms to me.

Day by day thy mem’ries haunt me,
Rich in all things bright and rare;
Night by night sweet dreams enchant me
Of thy beauties fresh and fair;

And my spirit seems to wander,
Ever joyous, fond and free,
O’er thy hills whose purple grandeur
Glows in king-like majesty;

Through thy glens that sweetly nourish
Many a flower of bonnie bloom,
Where the spinks and blue-bells flourish
Bright among the brier’s perfume;

Where the rowans hang like lusters
Red within the shady dells;
And the sweet blaeberry clusters
Blue among the heather-bells;

Where the deeds o’ martial glory
Hallow ilka hill and dale;
Where the wild, romantic story
Casts its charm o’er ilka vale;
TO MY NATIVE LAND.

Where sweet Poesy pipes her numbers
   Till the minstrels' airy dream
Haunts the wild where Echo slumbers,
   Sings in ilka crystal stream;

Where true manhood dwells serenely
   Moulded in heroic grace,
And fair virtue, meek but queenly,
   Beams in woman's angel face.

Thus to me thy memory giveth
   Joys that sweeten life's dull care;
Thus with me thy beauty liveth
   Like a presence ev'rywhere.

And the years that pass but brighten
   All thy graces fair and free,
As the moon-lit waters whiten
   On the dim and distant sea.

So may thou dwell with me ever
   Through the ceaseless flow of years,
Till the deep and dark Forever
   Ends my earthly hopes and fears.

Then 'twere happy, Caledonia,
   Aye to dwell serene in you,
Aye among the blythe and bonnie,
   Aye among the tried and true.
ANGUS RANKIN'S ELEGY.

BRITHER Scots wha'ere' ye be,
That lo'e auld Scotland's melodie,
Come join my wail wi' tearfu' e'e
An' hearts that bleed,
An' sad an' lanely mourn wi' me
For him that's dead!

Now silence haunts baith house an' ha'
Sin' Angus Rankin's worn awa';
He wha sae sweetly aye could blaw
The tunefu' reed,
The sweetest minstrel o' them a'—
Alas! he's dead!

O sirs! what glowing pictures thrang
In memory's treasured joys amang,
Whaur blithely aye his chanter rang,
A tunefu' skreed,
In warbled numbers loud an' lang—
But Rankin's dead!

How aft his sweet, inspiring strain
Wing'd Fancy owre the dark blue main,
Till heathery hill, an' grassy plain,
An' daisied mead,
Came fresh on memory's e'e again—
But Rankin's dead!
An' aft by some Columbian dell,
In woody grove or breezy fell,
His art divine threw sic a spell—
   It seemed indeed
The very grund was Scotland's sel'—
   But Rankin's dead!

When Hallowe'en or blithe New Year,
Or auld Saint Andrew's Day drew near,
His pipes aye roused sic social cheer—
   Fowk took nae heed,
But danced till they could hardly steer—
   But Rankin's dead!

When kilted Scots made grand parade,
In bonnets blue an' belted plaid,
Wi' what triumphant, martial tread
   He took the lead!
Heroic graces round him spread—
   But now he's dead!

Ilk clansman mark'd his manly air,
His modest mien an' form sae fair,
The eagle eye, the raven hair
   That graced his head:
Alas! he'll cheer their hearts nae mair—
   For Rankin's dead!

When athletes mustered on the green,
An' feats o' strength an' skill were seen,
What rousing blasts he blew between,
   An' pibroch's skreed!
He was th' Apollo o' the scene—
   But Rankin's dead!
When dancers danced the Highland Fling,
How Angus made the welkin ring!
Till tune an' time an' ilka thing
   Sae fired the head,
That nimble feet amaist took wing—
   But Rankin's dead!

Come, pipers, ye wha lo'ed him weel;
Come, Cleland, famed for blithesome reel;
Come, Grant an' Laurie, true as steel—
   An' Peter Reid,
Come blaw some weird an' wild fareweel
   For Angus dead!

Come, Music, frae thy starry sphere,
Come mourn thy loss amang us here;
Gar Fame gae sound her trumpet clear,
   Till a' tak' heed,
An' mournfu' drap a kindly tear
   For Rankin dead!
ST. ANDREW AND THE HAGGIS.

When on his travels through the warl',
He fand himsel' in great distress
In Macedonia's wilderness:
Grim hunger gnawed his wame within,
The cauld sleet soaked him to the skin;
An' buffeted wi' winds unruly,
He lookit like a tattie-dooly;
An' trauchled ae way or anither,
Tint cowl and bauchles a'thegither,
An' skelp'd on barefit through the gloom
In patient, perfect martyrdom.

A' shivering like a droukit mouse,
He halted at the halfway house,
An' spreading out his open palms
Fu' meekly beggit for an alms.
The landlord steer'd na frae the bit,
But e'ed the Saunt frae head to fit,
An' said: "You idle, gangrel crew,
Coarse crumbs should sair the like o' you;
"I set ye doun this bill o' fare—
The shakin's o' the meal-pock there,—
Some harigalds, an' sic-like trash,
That puir fowk use for makin' hash;—
Tak' them, an' mixed wi' creeshie dreep,
Boil in the stammack o' a sheep;
An' gin your greedy gab be nice,
There's ingans an' a shak' o' spice;—
Fa' to,—mak' guid use o' your time,
An' ken the rift o' stappit wame."

The Saunt in silence—shivering, cauld,
Made up the mess as he was tauld;
An' bent him canny owre the pot,
An' render'd thanks for a' he got;
An' ate his meal wi' cheerfu' grace,
An' never threw'd his honest face!

An' aye sin' syne on Andrew's nicht
We see this extraordinar' sicht,—
How social Scots owre a' the warl'
Will leave the fu' cog an' the barrel,
An' smack their lips, an' rive like mad,
At sic a dish as Andrew had.
An' 'gainst the pangs o' flesh an' bluid
They'll roose it up an' ca' it guid,
Though feeling in their heart's ain gloom
Some pangs o' Andrew's martyrdom!
THE MONK AND THE SPECTRE.

Emorn, as ancient legends tell,
A monk cam' hirplin frae his cell,
An' far an' near a-begging went
In favor o' his patron saint,
But barely got for a' his care
An antrin bawbee here an' there;
When, as the night began to fa',
He halted at a lordly ha',
An' pray'd fu' weary an' forlorn
To grant him shelter till the morn,
An' vow'd fu' thankfu' he would be
For ony gift they had to gie.

His Lairdship owre his deevil's books
Glower'd sour an' didna like his looks,
An' said there was nae room to spare
But ane, an' bogles haunted there;
An awesome place to pass the night,
Wi' sights unfit for human sight.
"But," said the Laird, "plain truth to tell,
He looks maist like a ghaist himsel';
Nae fleshless sprite or spectre grim
Could ever be but frends wi' him:
Gae, tak' him to the eerie place—
He'll meet but marrows face to face."

Neist morning when the monk cam' doun,
Then a' the gentry gather'd roun',
An' sair they questioned ane an' a'
What sounds he heard, what sights he saw.
“Ah!” quo’ the monk, “I saw a sight
Might freeze a mortal heart wi’ fright—
A spectre clad frae head to heel
In mouldy brass an’ rusty steel,
While stalk’d about, whiles seem’d to stand,
While rax’d to me a bluidy hand,
While sounds cam’ dowff frae a’ it did
Like clods upon a coffin lid!”

“Preserve us a’!” ilk ane replied;
“Amen to that!” his Lairdship cried.
“An’ did you raise your sad lament
Fu’ fervent to your patron saint?”
“Na, na!” the monk said; “weel I wat
I kent a trick worth twa o’ that;
I doff’d my cowl an’ spak him fair,
An’ speer’d if he’d a plack to spare;
But, like the feck o’ Adam’s race,
He wadna look me in the face,
Nor drap a plack, nor bide to speak,
But vanish’d like a waff o’ reek.”

Weel pleas’d to hear his pawky wit,
The braw fowk laughed till like to split,
An’ frae their purses clinkit doun
The cheenge o’ mony an orra crown;
An’ blithe the monk saw in his mind
This unco truth o’ humankind—
That he wha hings a hungry mou’
Will find it hard to warsle through;
While he that catches ilka chance
An’ mak’s the maist o’ circumstance
Is sure to speed the dreichest cause
An’ win his fellow-men’s applause.
LAMENT

ON THE OCCASION OF THE DEPARTURE OF ROBERT BUCHANAN, THE BRITISH POET, FROM AMERICA.

M Y Muse fu' dowie faulds her wing,
   An' nought but sabs an' sighs she'll bring:
   An' sad-eyed Sorrow bids me sing,
       Her tears to draw,
   How, like a wild bird journeying,
       Our Bard's awa'!

O Rab was bright an' warm an' free,
Like sunlight on a simmer sea!
He aye was fu' o' mirth an' glee
   An' wit an' a';
An' graced wi' gifts o' Poesy,—
       But Rab's awa'!

O blythe it was I trow to trace
The sweet saul in his manly face,
His blue een sparkling kindly grace
   On a' an' a':
Rab dearly lo'ed the human race,—
       But Rab's awa'!

The puir newspaper chields may mourn,
If Rab should never mair return;
His words cam' like a bick'rin burn
   An' filled them a':
He did them mony a friendly turn,—
       But Rab's awa'!
Play-actor billies round him hung,
An' listened to his silv'ry tongue,
That sweet as only clair'net rung
  In house or ha':
He was the pride o' auld an' young,—
  But Rab's awa'!

The lang-haired literary louns
That live real pur in muckle touns,
Will miss him for the royal boons
  He shower'd on a',—
Bright silver bits as big's half-crowns,—
  But Rab's awa'!

O when he met wi' men o' spirit,
Real clever cheilds o' modest merit,
Owre oysters an' a glass o' claret,—
  O then—hurrah!
The very earth they did inherit,—
  But Rab's awa'!

That day he gaed on board the ship,
He gied my hand a kindly grip,
An' while a tremor shook his lip,
  Said—"Tell them a'"
They'll never frae my memory slip
  When I'm awa'.''

Quo' I, wi' heart as saft as jeel,
  "Braw be your chance in Fortune's wheel;
May seas slip past your sliding keel
  Wi' canny jaw,
An' may the bodies use ye weil
  When far awa'.'
Sin' syne I muse on Fortune's quirk:
She shines, then leaves me in the mirk;
I canna sleep nor wreat nor wirk,
    Nor ought ava,—
I'm doited as a daunter'd stirk
    Sin' Rab's awa'.

But whiles round Friendship's wreathéd urn
Hope's vestal fires fu' brightly burn;
An' though the vanish'd joys I mourn
    That blossomed braw,
Wha kens but Rab may yet return?—
    Though Rab's awa'!
ELEGY

ON THE DEATH OF JAMES FLEMING, THE SCOTTISH ATHLETE.

COME, a' yea athletes crouse an' keen,
Frae Gallowa' to Aberdeen,
Wha like to loup or put the stane,
Or rin a race,
Come, let the tear-draps frae your een
Rin doun your face.

The noble Fleming's breath'd his last!
My hamely muse stands maist aghast
To mark how Fortune's cauldrife blast,
In hapless time,
Has laid him low ere barely past
His manly prime.

Oh, Jamie was a gallant chield
As ever stood in open field!
His stalwart, grand, heroic build,
And honest face,
To admiration aye appeal'd
In ilka place.

Nae pride had he like them langsyne,
When athletes maist were thought divine,
When years o' practice they'd combine,
Wi' nae sma' scaith,
For olives on their brows to twine
Or laurel wreath.
For though, in mony a manly feat,
Braw, buirdly shields by him were beat,
He ne'er was fash'd wi' sour conceit
   Like mony a gowk;
But wrought his wark an' gaed his gate
   Like ither fowk.

What visions rise on memory's e'e,
Wi' glints o' joyous youth to me,
When thrangin' thousands in their glee
   Cam' round the ring,
Where Jamie in his majesty
   Was like a king!

An' aye sae blythe he took a part
In ilka feat o' manly art,
Nae man, however bauld or smart,
   In lith or limb,
Could ever daunt the lion heart
   That beat in him.

O weel he liked in Lowland touns
To warsle wi' the English loons;
He didna play at ups an' douns—
   An idle trick—
But garr'd their heels flee owre their crowns
   In double quick!

At running races, short or lang,
I wat ye couldna come him wrang:
When to the hill wi' furious thrang
   They swat an' fyked,
The first half-mile he let them gang
   As fast's they liked—
But fleetly homeward on the track,
When little headway they could mak',
He led the whazzlin' stragglers back
In proud career,
Fu' fleetly springing and as swack
As ony deer.

At caber-tossing, when the rest
Had trauchled sair an' dune their best,
Then Jamie to the final test
Wi' power advanced—
Fierce as a cyclone in the West—
An' owre it danc'd!

An' grand it was to ane an' a'
To see him poise the iron ba',
Then send it wi' a spring awa'
As clean's a quoit—
While owre the lave an ell or twa
He garr'd it skyte!

An' O, it set him aye sae weel
At Highland fling or foursome reel;
Fu' blithely he could cut an' wheel
Wi' manly grace,
An' modest smiles aye wreath'd genteel
On Jamie's face.

But Jamie's strength and Jamie's grace—
The pride o' Scotland's stalwart race—
Has found a lang, last resting-place
Beyond the deep,
Where far Australia's headlands trace
Their rocky steep.
An' though cauld death, the last o' ills,
Earth's weary care forever stills,
'Twere kind amo' the Athole hills
   To hae him laid,
Mourn'd by the murmur o' the rills,
   Row'd in his plaid.

But maybe 'yont the Southron seas,
Far aff at the Antipodes,
Like thistle-down upo' the breeze,
   The wandering Scot
May come, an' wi' a tear bapteese
   The hallowed spot.

God shield his saul in Heaven's high hame!
Few earn a braver, kindlier name;
An' though he's cross'd dark Lethe's stream
   Frae human e'e,
His memory, like a gowden dream,
   Will bide wi' me.
TO THE SHADE OF BURNS,

ON THE OCCASION OF UNVEILING A STATUE TO HIS MEMORY IN CENTRAL PARK, NEW YORK.

BRIGHT spirit, whose transcendent song
Hath charmed earth’s utmost bound,
Till from her solitudes among
Comes ringing back the sound.

Come where the wild Atlantic waves
Have hush’d their ceaseless roar,
And, softly as a zephyr, laves
Columbia’s happy shore.

See where the thronging thousands stand
In reverence to thee;
The witching charm,—the magic wand,—
Thy matchless minstrelsy!

They see in monumental bronze
Thy manly form and face;
They hear in music’s sweetest tones
Thy spirit’s grander grace.

And though from many lands they came,
To brotherhood they’ve grown,
By thee their pulses throb the same,
Their hearts are all thy own.
And we whose childhood's home was thine,
  What joy thy memory brings!
To us thou seem'st as more divine
  Than earth-created things.

For all youth's fairy scenes and glee,
  Loves, hopes and fancies fain,
In Poesy's art illumed by thee,
  Come back to us again;

And past and present all appear
  Transfigured by thy grace,
Till Hope points where in grander sphere
  We'll meet thee face to face.
THE SONGS OF SCOTLAND.

How dear to ev'ry Scottish heart
Are Scotland's melodies!
They sweeten life's dull atmosphere
Like perfume in the breeze:
Blithe as the wild bird's artless notes
The greenwood groves among,
Earth's sweetest, noblest thoughts are those
That warble into song.

Their mellow music circles round
The glad earth far and free,
Like light they leap from land to land
And flash from sea to sea,
Till wakened echoes gladly ring
In ev'ry vale and hill,
And earth and air, exultant, catch
The quick electric thrill.

How bright to fancy's eye they bring
Fair Scotland's classic land!
Her hills, in purple splendor clad,
Rise cloud-like, high and grand;
Her rustling wealth of golden fields
Wave 'neath the glad'ning ray,
Her silv'ry waters flash among
Her valleys green and gay.

68
Fair flow’rets bloom in tints that mock
The rainbow’s dazzling dyes,
And daisies ope with modest grace
Their myriad starry eyes;
While all the glow of social life
Comes group’d in living throngs,
Transfigured by the magic grace
And beauty of her songs.

And where have love’s impassioned throes
E’er found so sweet a tongue?
No mimic frenzy mocks the heart
When Scotland’s songs are sung:
Their artless words, their liquid notes,
In perfect tones express
The matchless might of manly grace
And woman’s tenderness.

While, buoyant on the tide of time,
What glorious tales they tell
Of freemen battling for the right—
Of gallant foes that fell!
Of heroes who tempestuous rose
The tyrant’s touch to spurn;
The glowing pride of Stirling Bridge—
The joy of Bannockburn!

O Scotland! raise thy crested head
Above the azure sea:
Thou art the home of worth and truth,
The cradle of the free.
Where’er the eye of Time shall see
Bold Freedom’s flag unfurl’d,
Thy songs shall stamp thy sons among
The freemen of the world.
Thy voice in thunder ever pleads
   The cause of human wrongs:
Thy seal is set, thy fame is fixed
   Eternal as thy songs,
Whose clarion blasts shall bravely ring
   In Freedom's battle van,
Until triumphant they shall hail
   The unity of Man!
THE REFUGEES.

PORT ROYAL FERRY, COOSAW RIVER, SOUTH CAROLINA, APRIL, 1862.

DOWN beside the Coosaw River,
'Neath the night fog's dreary pall,
Nothing stirr'd the sullen silence
Save the rebel sentry's call.

Sullenly as crouching panthers,
In the thicket, fierce and grim,
Strode the wary, watchful pickets
By the dusky river's brim.

There the Highlanders were gathered,
Who to battle had come forth,
Rank'd beneath the flag of Freedom,
Muster'd with the loyal North.

Scottish fires of valor stirred them
With the spirit of their race;
And they long'd to meet the foemen
In a battle, face to face.

But the days pass'd by unchalleng'd,
And the sickly, Southern swamp
Breath'd its fetid, foul miasma
Through the sullen, silent camp.
Fierce the lurid eye of heaven,
Seem'd to mock their mortal ills
With the furnace fires of noonday
And the damp night's sudden chills.

Here and there the low palmettos
Hung their drooping plumes of green,
Listless as the silent armies,
And the waters spread between.

Oft the Scots in fancy wander'd
O'er the wide Altantic sea,
Where the idle winds of heaven
Blew in springtime freshness free;

Where the hills in Highland heather,
On their vision high and grand,
Rose in all the purple splendor
Of their loved, their native land.

Where the scent of rainbow blossoms
Nature's incense sweet combines,
Blending all the balmy breezes
With the odor of the pines.

Where the green and golden glory,
Of the glad fields sweep along,
And the air is all melodious
With the skylark's warbled song.

Little dream'd they of the summer,
With its havoc-kindling breath,
With its fiery blasts of battle,
With its harvest fields of death;
Of the charge at James' Island,
    Through the blazing batteries' smoke,—
Of the storm at dark Chantilly,
    Where the heavens in thunder spoke!

Or of trampling fallen foemen
    On South Mountain's ghastly ridge,
Or of charging through the tempest
    At Antietam's bloody bridge.

But there came a touch of action,
    One prophetic, brightening beam,
Breaking in a flash of triumph
    On the Coosaw's murky stream.

When beyond the darken'd river,
    Dim beside the drooping trees,
Beckoning to take them over,
    Stood a band of refugees.

By the first dull dawn of morning
    Eager forms they darkly trace;
Hear them faintly calling to them,
    Dimly see each ebon face.

Soon the Highlanders are helping,
    Soon they ply the busy oar,
Clearing fast the dusky waters
    Till they reach the rebel shore.

But behold! where down the causeway,
    Sloping to the river's brim,
Rebel horse and cannon coming,
    Dashing onward, fiercely grim.
And ere yet each loyal oarsman
On the backward journey sets,
See the Coosaw's sedges bristling
Into glittering bayonets!

See the gleaming guns unlimber'd!
Hear the rattling ramrod's blow;
See the brazen, murd'rous muzzles
Level'd at them as they row!

Will the gallant oarsmen falter
And for mercy now implore?
Never!—silence is but broken
By the steady-striking oar.

Not a single word is spoken;
Teeth are set and tongues are dumb,
Waiting for the shower of grape-shot,
With the cannon's breath to come!

But behold! each keen eye brightens
As they hear the new alarms—
Drums are rolling—bugles warbling—
Calling Union men to arms.

There—a line of level'd rifles,
There are charges—shell and shot,—
Ramm'd by loyal cannoneers
In the cannon's brazen throat.

Fierce they aim beyond the river
At the dark, rebellious host,
Fierce they aim, but in a moment
All the embattled view is lost.
Naught is there but gray mist hanging
   Low on river and on wood,
And the shrivel'd sedges standing
   Where the Rebel foemen stood.

And the boat in triumph onward,
   Hailed by Union Volunteers,
Strikes the happy shores of Freedom,
   In a burst of ringing cheers.

While the negroes seem'd transfigured
   As from Slavery's bondage then,
Freedom's rapture overcame them
   In the ranks of freeborn men.

How the first glad gleam of morning
   Shining in the eastern skies,
Glorified their happy faces
   And illumed their grateful eyes.

Till they seemed with joy enraptured
   Telling in their ecstasy,
Earth's serenest, brightest sunshine
   Is the light of liberty.

So in Freedom's cause forever,
   Wheresoe'er her battles be,
Thus shall Scotland's sons be ready
   'Mong the valiant and the free.

Foremost in the day of peril,
   Bravest in the hour of fight,
They await no proclamation
   In the cause of human right.
From the past the martial story
Of their prowess boldly brings
Visions of heroic battles
Where the burnish'd armor rings.

Telling to the storied centuries,
'Mid a list'ning world's applause,
Scottish swords are ever ready
To be drawn in Freedom's cause.

Scottish hearts and hands responsive,
Battle for the highest good,
Hastening on the coming Union
Of our common brotherhood!
THE TWO BROTHERS.

AT JAMES ISLAND, SOUTH CAROLINA, JUNE, 16 '62.

They march'd to battle, side by side,
Two brothers, young and fair;
And youthful beauty graced each brow,
Bedeck'd with golden hair;
And lion-hearted courage gleamed
In their heroic air.

And when the cannon boom'd above
The ringing Rebel yell,
And charging columns crouch'd beneath
The shower of shot and shell,
The brothers stood like demons in
The lurid fires of hell!

From right to left each flash that burst
And cleaved the midnight sky,
Revealed each bayonet's glittering gleam
And lit each flashing eye,
As forward, side by side, they strode,
Resolved to do or die.

Full well before that battle blast
The bravest heart might quail,
As thinner grew the charging ranks
Beneath the iron hail,
As sheaves are level'd to the earth
Before an autumn gale.
Till fiercely on the rampart's height
The Rebel foemen feel
The wildly grand terrific dash
Of waves of level'd steel,
And fast before that Northern charge
Their shatter'd squadrons reel.

A moment on the bristling crest
The brothers bravely stand,
A gleam of triumph on each face;
Each waves a battle brand,
But hark! the distant bugles call
A sudden, strange command.

And backward o'er the hard-won field
The gallant victors go;
Again the frowning ramparts hide
The vanquish'd Rebel foe;
Again the batteries' blasting breath
Lays many a hero low.

Till scarce beyond the battle storm
And shrieking shell and shot,
They close the riven ranks, they fling
The starry flag afloat;
One brother answers to the call,
The other answers not.

Deep from the brother's stricken heart
In pangs of dark despair,
Is breath'd in sobs of silent woe
The breath of silent prayer,
When through the serried ranks he finds
His brother is not there.
He gazes o'er that field of death
A moment, and is gone;
Back through the drifts of battle wreck
Among the dead alone,
He seeks the fallen in the field,
And views them one by one.

His eyes grow dim as comrades lie
Before his eager sight,
Full well he knows each marble face
That glimmers ghastly white
Beneath the waning moon and stars
That dim their spectral light.

At last when near the fatal fort,
Amid the carnage dire,
He sees the fallen form he loves,
He clasps his heart's desire.
The foemen see them, and—behold!
A sudden flash of fire!

And side by side the brothers fall,
Lock'd in a fast embrace;
And side by side the eye of day
Beholds them face to face,
Laid 'neath the Carolinian sod
In their last resting-place.

One flag waves free o'er all the land
For which they nobly died;
One wreath of evergreen entwines
The brave in battle tried;
And they who fall in Freedom's cause
By death are glorified!
In endless calm they dwell serene
In Fame's high Parthenon;
Their voices echo down the years
In truth's eternal tone;
To higher aims, to nobler deeds
Their souls are marching on.
AMONG THE GRAMPIAN HILLS.

LAD AND LASS.

Sometimes by rocky heights they stray'd,
Sometimes by deep and ferny glade,
And sometimes on by pathways green,
Along the bank of deep ravine,
While far beneath, in headlong force,
Some mountain torrent cleav'd its course,
And woke the echoes from their sleep
With wrathful brawlings loud and deep.
Sometimes the soaring falcon spread
His quivering pinions overhead,
And hung, unmoved, as if intent
To watch the wand'ring's as they went;
And sometimes springing, fleet and fast,
The stately red deer bounded past,
And paused between them and the sky
To turn a soft and wondering eye.
In hollow vales by dark green woods
Sweet music charm'd the solitudes:
The blackbird led the vocal choir,
The skylark, like a flash of fire,
Seem'd glittering bright the clouds among
And pour'd his flood of fervid song;
The merry linnet, in the bush,
Sang sweetly to the answering thrush;
And to the lovers ev’rything
Proclaimed a joyous welcoming.
For them all things of earth and air
Seem’d blent in beauty bright and fair;
To them all things seem’d glad and young;
For them the woodland echoes rung;
For them a thousand dazzling dyes
Of flow’rets oped their dewy eyes.
In shady nooks the primrose lent
A golden grace where’er they went;
While laden bees, on tireless wings,
Humm’d soft their drowsy murmurings.
Beneath, the purple heather spread;
The bluebell raised its modest head
And quiver’d on its tender stem,
As if ’twere glad to look at them.
Aloft, the bright red rowans shone;
The foxglove waved the wanderers on.
The green firs spread their ample shade
By many a sweet and silent glade,
And seem’d to woo the happy pair
To look and pause and linger there.
AMONG THE CATSKILL MOUNTAINS.

SOFTLY the mist-mantled mountains arise
Dim in the dawning of opal-hued skies;
Brighter and brighter the highlands are seen
Robed in the splendor of emerald green;
Nearer and clearer peaks burst on the view,
Lightened by silvery flashes of dew.
Valley on valley comes, hill upon hill,
Streamlet to streamlet and rill unto rill.
Gracefully garlanded foliage of vines,
Wilderness-wreaths that encircle the pines,
Clasp the dark underland, cunningly weaves
All the wild wonderland, lab’rinth of leaves.
Rainbow-hued flowerets blossom to view,
Purple and amethyst, orange and blue,
Starry-eyed, tassel-hung, fold upon fold,
Whiter than silver and brighter than gold.
Hemlock and cedar boughs, maple and beech
Crowd into clusters and whisper in speech.
Poplars majestic as sentinels stand,
Fir trees on fir trees rise solemn and grand.
Summits are laurel-crowned, each crag receives
Wonderful wealth of luxuriant leaves
Gilt with a glory where golden-rods bloom,
Redden’d where ripe berries blush in the gloom.
Hangs the fruit banquet-like, luscious and sweet,
Dropping in prodigal wealth at my feet.
Cool the dark coverts are, dim the green shades,
Lofty the leafy roofs arching the glades.
Underfoot, woven wreaths twining the stems,
Overhead, crested plumes splendid with gems.
O, to dwell ever here! Summit of bliss!
Where is the fairyland fairer than this?
Earth hath not fairer or grander to see,
Fancy not rarer that cometh to me.
Day-dreams that haunt me come fair to the sight,
Dreams that enchant me illumine the night.
Oft in the desert of life's joyless throng,
Dear as the mem'ries that echo in song,
Comes the green mountain land, fresh in its grace,
Sweet as a smile on a beautiful face,
All the white wonders of day-dawns arise,
All the bright splendors of sapphirine skies;
All the gay gladness of beauty and bloom,
All the sweet sadness of silence and gloom,
All the glad story of forest and flower,
All the red glory of sunsetting hour,
Comes till I seem to lie lapp'd in bright dreams,
Lull'd by the lullaby murmur of streams!
IN MEMORIAM.

J. C. M.

He sleeps; and o'er his honored tomb
Let June's enamelled verdure grow:
Earth's fairest gems no purer bloom
Than he who rests below.

He lived as lived the hallowed saints
To darker ages kindly given,
Whose presence lent life's discontents
A healing touch of heaven.

He came, and earth new beauty wore—
Ev'n care assumed a gentle grace;
And darkening doubts aye fled before
God's sunshine in his face.

I loved him; yet I grieve not now,
Though quenched that wealth of golden speech,
Nor mourn though glory gilds his brow
Beyond my little reach.

Around me still his friendship clings,
Upon my path his blessing lies,
Sweet as the light from angel's wings
That beams and beautifies.

His voice still greets me from afar,
Like anthems echoing far away;
His presence fades but as a star
That melts in perfect day.
SONGS.

'THE BONNIE LASS THAT’S FAR AWA’.

She’s far awa’ that won my heart,
  The lassie wi’ the glancing een;
  Nor Nature’s wark, nor mortal’s airt,
  Can bring me aught sae rare I ween;
For though the seas row deep between,
  An’ lanely looks baith house an’ ha’,
Fond recollection aye keeps green
  The bonnie lassie that’s far awa’.

Or if at time frae mem’ry’s e’e
  She fades as gloaming fades to night,
If but some winsome lass I see,
  Wi’ jimpy waist an’ een that’s bright,
My heart gaes fluttering at the sight,
  An’ staps the breath I’m gaun to draw,
While fancy paints in glowing light
  The bonnie lass that’s far awa’.

Glide by, ye weary winter days;
  Glide by, ye nights sae lang an’ drear;
How swiftly sped time’s Gowden rays,
  When Simmer’s sang an’ love were here.
Then come, sweet Spring, revive the year,
  Bring verdure to the leafless shaw,
An’ bring the lass that I lo’e dear—
  The bonnie lass that’s far awa’.

86
CAM' YE OWRE THE FULTON FERRY?

CAM’ ye owre the Fulton Ferry?
   Heard ye pipers bravely blaw?
   Saw ye clansmen blithe an’ merry
   In the Caledonian Ha’?
A’ their siller brooches glancing,
   A’ their tartan waving green,
A’ their glorious mirth an’ dancing,
   Were na match to bonnie Jean.

Ilka lad was glow’rin’ at her,—
   Vow but mony ane was fain;
Pawky rogues forgot to flatter,
   Wishing Jeanie were their ain.
When she spak’ they stood an’ wondered,
   As when subjects hear a queen;
Lasses too were maist dumfounder’d—
   A’ the lads were after Jean.

Lang they’ve wrought on plans for bringing
   A’ the bodies to the ha’;
Some would come to hear the singing,
   Some to see a friend or twa.
A’ their schemes hae seen conclusion,
   They may rest content I ween;
Fowk gae thrangin’ by the thousand’
   Just to look at bonnie Jean.

87
O MARY, DO YE MIND THE DAY?

MARY, do ye mind the day
When we were daffin on the green?
Sae sweet an' couthie 's ye did say
Your gentle heart was gien to nane.
The opening bloom o' seventeen,
Like violet begun to blaw,
Grac'd ilka charm, when saft at e'en
Ye bade me bide a year or twa.

An' years hae pass'd, sweet lass, sin' syne—
Lang years upon life's stormy sea,
But bright an' brighter aye ye shine
The beacon light o' memory's e'e;
An' aye my thoughts flee back to thee,
Like swallows wing'd frae far awa';
An' aye I mind ye said to me,
"O laddie, bide a year or twa."

Then, lassie, come wi' a' thy charms,
I wat I'm wearied o' mysel';
I'll clasp thee in my longing arms,
An' aye thegither we will dwell.
O gar my heart wi' rapture swell,
O dinna, dinna say me na,
For brawly do ye mind yoursel'
Ye bade me bide a year or twa.
NOW SIMMER CLEEDS THE GROVES IN GREEN.

NOW simmer cleeds the groves in green,
   An' decks the flow'ry brae;
   An' fain I'd wander out at e'en,
   But out I daurna gae.
For there's a laddie down the gate
   Wha 's like a ghaist to me;
   An' gin I meet him air or late,
   He winna lat me be.

He glow'rs like ony silly gowk,
   He ca's me heavenly fair;
I bid him look like ither fowk,
   An' fash me sae nae mair.
I ca' him coof an' hav'rel too,
   An' frown wi' scornfu' e'e;
But a' I say, or a' I do,
   He winna lat me be.

My cousin Kate she flytes me sair,
   An' says I yet may rue;
She rooses aye his yellow hair
   And een o' bonnie blue.
Quo' she, "If e'er ye want a man,
   Juist bid him wait a wee."
I think I'll hae to tak' her plan—
   He winna lat me be.

89
MARY WI’ THE GOWDEN HAIR.

MARY wi’ the gowden hair,
Bonnie Mary, gentle Mary;
O but ye are sweet an’ fair,
My winsome, charming Mary.
Your een ar like the starnies clear,
Your cheeks like blossoms o’ the brier,
An’ O your voice is sweet to hear,
My ain, my bonnie dearie.

But dearer than your bonnie face,
Bonnie Mary, gentle Mary,
Or a’ your beauty’s bloom an’ grace,
My winsome, charming Mary,
Is ilka motion, void o’ airt,
That lends a grace to ilka pairt,
An’ captivates ilk manly heart,
Wi’ love for thee, my dearie.

But Mary, lassie, tak’ advice,
Bonnie Mary, gentle Mary;
Be mair than guid, braw lass,—be wise,
My winsome, charming Mary,
An’ gie your heart to ane that’s true,
Wha’ll live to love nae ane but you;
An’ blithe you’ll be an’ never rue,
My ain, my bonnie dearie.

90
BONNIE NORANSIDE.

WHEN joyful June wi' gladsome grace
   Comes deck'd wi' blossoms fair,
   An' twines round Nature's bonnie face
Her garlands rich and rare,
How swift my fancy wings awa'
   Out owre yon foaming tide,
And fondly paints each leafy shaw
   On bonnie Noranside!

O sweetly there the wild flow'rs spring
   Beside the gowany lea!
O blithely there the wild birds sing
   On ilka bush and tree!
While purple hills an' valleys green,
   Array'd in Simmer's pride,
Spread lavish to the longing een
   By bonnie Noranside.

Ye Powers wha shape our varied track
   On life's uncertain sea,
As bright there comes in fancy back
   Youth's fairy scenes to me,
Sae bring me back, I fondly pray,
   To where my auld freends bide,
To spend ae lee lang Simmer's day
   By bonnie Noranside.
BONNIE JEAN.

WHERE Feugh rins to the winding Dee,
    'Mang meadows fresh an' green;
    An' bluebells deck the gowany lea,
By stately Cloch-na-Ben,
There dwells a lass fu' blithe an' gay,
    Wi' bonnie laughing een;
The balmy summer's sunny day
    Nae fairer is than Jean.

How cheery rings the shelfa's sang
    Amang the hazel howes!
An' fair the gowden tassels hang
    Upon the gay, green kowes!
Sweet blossoms tempt the wand'ring bee,
    Fair as the rainbow's sheen;
Sae shines in beauty's bloom to me
    The rosy cheeks o' Jean.

O aft on fancy's fairy wing,
    That wanders far and free,
I come in bright imagining
    Frae ower th' Atlantic sea.
While mem'ry paints ilk leafy shaw,
    Ilk meadow fair an' green;
But aye serene aboon them a'
    I mind on bonnie Jean.
I WONDER IF THE BONNIE LADDIE THINKS ON ME.

I wonder if the bonnie laddie thinks on me;
There's a dimple on his chin and a sparkle in his e'e—
And I wonder if the bonnie laddie thinks on me!

Now June has spread her mantle green on ilka bank and brae
An' blooms are hanging on the broom and blossoms on the slae;
The birds are singing to their mates on ilka bush an' tree—
And I wonder if the bonnie laddie thinks on me!

The sun is shining in the lift sae bonnie and sae clear;
O, June's the brawest, blythest month o' a' the happy year!
For then the flowers I like the best they bloom sae fair and free—
And I wonder if the bonnie laddie thinks on me!

He daurna look the airt o' me for fear his mither frown;
I daurna look the airt o' him for fowk about the toun;
DOES THE BONNIE LADDIE THINK ON ME.

But whiles I canna help but catch the glad glance o' his e'e—
O, I wonder if the bonnie laddie thinks on me!

I wonder if the bonnie laddie thinks on me;
I wonder if the bonnie laddie thinks on me;
There's a dimple on his chin and a sparkle in his e'e—
And I wonder if the bonnie laddie thinks on me!
LYRICAL CHARACTER SKETCHES.

"Unskilled the subtle lines to trace,
Or softer shades of Nature's face,
I view her common forms with unanointed eyes."

—Whittier.

THE ANXIOUS MITHER.

NAE doot the mither's guid advice,
Had help'd to mak' the lad sae wise,
For she ne'er slowth'd his education,
In keepin' aye frae a' temptation,
Especially aye to bear in mind
An' no tak' up wi' womankind.

"Tak' wha ye like amang the rest,
They're but a heart-brak at the best;
Nae worth their lugs,"—she used to say,—
"'No nane the same 's when in my day
They used to be whaur they were bidin'
Aye gath'rin' a' kind o' providin',
Sae when they married they could see
Their house filled as it ought to be;
But noo-a-days they didna care,
For feint the thing they had to spare;
For a' their weel-won, hard-earn'd cash
Was thrown awa' on feckless trash,
To cleed their backs or busk their tap;
What use were they to ony chap?
Sic jauds would never think 't a sin
To spend mair than their men could win."

95
Thus Jean would argue—Jock, douce youth,
Thocht this was gey an' near the truth,
An' had resolved that come what will,
He'd aye bide wi' his mither still—
Nae lass would ever hae the blame
O' wilein' him awa' frae hame,
Nor lead him on to nae disgrace.
But sic resolves in mony case
Are juist like frost, that hauds like death
Till ance it finds the simmer's breath;
Thought it may hap the torrent's pride,
An' freeze the burn frae side to side,
Till they nae sign o' life may show,
The water runs unseen below,
An' when the slack'nin' thowes begin,
The ice gies way wi' little din,
An' helps to swell the burnies' roar
That it had tried to stap before.
THE LICHTSOME LASS.

HERE cam' a lass to that same toun,
Whaur Jock wrocht sin' he was a loon,—
A clever quean, baith frank an' free,
An' blithesome 's ony lass could be;
For she could sing a rantin' sang,
Or dance wi' glee the hale nicht lang;
An' lads would strive—sae pleas'd to see her,
To hae the chance o' dancin' wi' her.
An' mony ane would whisper licht,—
"Jess, I'm gaun hame wi' you the nicht."

The douce auld folk aft shook their heads,
As if her mirth bespoke misdeeds,
An' prophesied sic glaiket dame
Would some day bring hersel' to shame,
An' lang palavers aften made;
But Jess ne'er minded what they said,—
Auld hav'rin' bodies, she would tell,
Forget when they were young themsel'.

What signified their idle jeer,—
They could na say that Jess was sweer,
Nor weirdless, for there ne'er was seen
A country lass mair trig an' clean;
An' aye when 't was her Sabbath oot,
For Jess was 'greed for week aboot,
She never bade at hame frae kirk,
Though hard aneuch she had to wirk.
The hale week through in barn or byre;
But Jess, stout lass, ne'er spak' o' tire,
But started aff, sometimes her lane
Four guid lang miles if it were ane.
Nor gaed she there to mak' a show,—
Though whiles her neibours said 't was so;
She heeded nae sic ill-tongued vermin,
But paid attention to the sermon,
An' aften put them a' to shame
In afternoons when she cam' hame,
For she would get them a' thegither,
An' lecture them like ony mither,
An' skelps o' preachings she would tell
As guid's the minister himsel'.
THE AULD-FARRANT CARL.

BUT mark me, lad, aye bear in mind,
An' keep frae drink o' a' kin-kind,
An' aye observe the Sabbath day
Whatever ither fowk may say.
Wear ye a guid coat if ye can,
For maist o' fowk aye judge the man
Far mair by what 's upon his back,
Than what's intill him,—though the fact
Stands guid—that it 's aye best to be Better than what the common e'e
 Might judge ye,—but though 't cost ye fyke,
Try aye an' no look orra like.

Dinna be keen to get acquaint
Wi' ilka ane, for gin ye want
Help frae a freend, ye'll sune find out
There 's nae a puirer substitute
Than wide acquaintance,—ance begin
To prove a friend—through thick an' thin,
Stick till 'im; but aye understand
Afore ye lend a helpin' hand
To ony ane, how far his need
Requires ye, for should ye exceed
His wants, ye'll maistly aye depend,
'T will turn out thankless at the end.
Should ye be kept at poortith's brink,
Keep up your heart nor let ane think

99
Your purse is toom—'t will do nae guid,
Although the fact be understood,
An' maist o' fowk somehow or ither
Think sense an' siller gangs thegither.

What orra time ye hae to spare,
Ware 't na on rinnin' here an' there,
But owre 'n abune your daily wark,
Hae ye some ither worthy mark
To aim at,—though success in sma's
May come, yet like the drap that fa's
Doun frae the roofs o' sparry caves,
Unheard 't may be 'mang plash o' waves,
But ilka drap brings bits o' limeo
That gath'rin' in the course o' time
Builds up itsel' in grand extent
An everlasting monument.
THE WITLESS LADDIE.

TAM ANDERSON was an apprentice loun
Wha sair’d his time in Dundee,
The lichtsomest lads ye could meet i’ the toun
Were feint a bit blither than he.
An’ he has gaen north out-owre the hill
To dance his New Year’s reel,
An’ through the deep snaw he’s wander’d awa’,
For Tam was a lang-leggit chiel.

An’ Tam had a lass that lived i’ the North,
An’ a canty auld mither forby,
As kind an auld bodie ’s e’er lived on the earth,
An’ Tam was her pride an’ her joy.
An’ lang they had look’d for the blithesome new year,
An’ counted the days ere they cam’,
For blithe was the thought o’ the joy to be brought
Wi’ the grand hame-coming o’ Tam.

The crusie was lighted on Hogmanay night,
An’ hung i’ the window sae clear,
An’ the auld mither watch’d by the gleam o’ the light
To see gin her laddie was near.
An’ the lassie that lived at the fit o’ the brae,
Her heart was gaun duntin I trow,
As she busk’d hersel’ braw in her wincey an’ a’,
An’ her hair wi’ ribbons o’ blue.

101
But Tam had just come to the fit o' the glen
Whaur the yill-house stands a' alane,
An' there was sic rowth o' young women an' men
As blithesome as ever were seen;
An' Tam being cauld wi' the frost an' the snaw,
He ventured to look in a wee,
An' ilk ane cried, "Tam, here, man, tak' a dram,
Tam Anderson, drink wi' me."

The lasses thrang'd round, for they likit Tam weel,
A braw strappin' lad was he,
Till Tam's frozen shanks grew souple 's an eel,
An' his head grew light as a bee;
Till rantin' wi' this ane, an' drinking wi' that,
An' laughing an' dancing wi' glee,
He thought nae a hair on his mither nae mair
Nor the lass wi' the bonnie blue e'e.

His mither sat late, his mither sat lang,
An' waefu' forebodings had she,—
O whaur was her laddie?—O surely some wrang
Had keepit him yet in Dundee.
An' the lassie she sat by the fire alane,
As dowie as dowie could be;
Ilk sough o' the blast sae eerie blew past,
But brought na the joy o' her e'e.

Sae the auld year pass'd amid frolic an' din,
Whaur Tam was the king o' the core:
As sune as the breath o' the new year cam' in
The youngsters made aff to the door;
An' some wad gae here, an' some wad gae there,
To ca' on their neibors sae crouse,
But Tam he set aff wi' the help o' his staff
To seek for his mither's bit house.
But whaur he had wander'd there's nae ane can tell,
He paidlet through thick an' through thin;
But ere it was morning he cam' to himsel'
Wi' a plash owre the lugs i' the linn.
His hands were a' scarted, his coat was a' spoiled
Wi' mony a rive an' a tear,
His teeth chatter'd grim, ye'd hae hardly kenn'd him,
An' the tangles hung stiff on his hair.

In this waefu' like plight like a warlock he cam
An' rapp'd at his auld mither's door;
The mither gaed running an' crying, "Here's Tam!"
An' then loot a terrible roar.
She swarf'd clean awa' as gin she was dead,
Till Tam took her up on his knee,
An' he brought her round frae her terrible stound,
Crying "Mither, O mither, it 's me!"

"Preserve 's!" cried the mither, "O Tam, is that you?
O sirs! but ye've gien me a fright;
My poor cauldriife laddie, my ain dawtie doo,
O whaur hae ye been a' the night?
Let me lay your claes by, O Tammy, my man,
Tak' aff your stockings an' shoon;
Lie doun for a wee, an' lat sleep close your e'e;
O me, but you're daidlet an' dune!"

An' glad was poor Tam to get rest to his shanks,
An' sleep to his drumlie e'e;
For wi' ranting an' drinking an' playing his pranks,
It's unco forfouched was he.
An’ he bade his mither to wauken him up
   As sune as he’d haen a bit nap;
An’ she put a het pan to his feet—poor man:
   An’ he sune was as soun’ as a tap.

The neibors ca’d in wi’ the scraigh o’ the day,
   An’ speer’d if young Tammas had come;
The mither gaed cannie to whaur Tammie lay,
   But Tam was baith deaf and dumb.
She cowpit him owre and sang in his lug,
   She kittleed the soles o’ his feet,
But he slept as serene as though he had been
   Streik’t out in his winding sheet.

Wi’ pleasure an’ sport a’ the kintra through,
   The auld an’ the young were right keen,
But Tam’s mither watch’d like a sentinell true,
   While Tam never open’d his een;
Till just as the gloamin’ was wearing to night
   Some lads frae the neighboring toun
Ca’d in wi’ a dram an’ up loupit Tam,
   Array’d in his mither’s night-gown.

Dumfounder’d he glower’d like a throwither chiel,
   While ilka ane laugh’d at the sight;
An’ the piper he screwed up his drones for a reel,
   An’ struck up a lilt wi’ might.
Tam chirkit his teeth an’ he danc’d wi’ spite,
   An’ he knockit the piper right doun;
An’ as ilka ane made for the door an’ fled,
   Tam swore like an English dragoon.
How he greed wi' his mither, what vows had been heard
By the lass wi' the bonnie blue e'e;
What grand resolutions the lad had declared,
It makens na to you or to me.
But the truth to be learn'd frae lessons like Tam's
Might be sung in a measure sublime:
At duty strive mair, count pleasure a snare,
An' joys they will come in their time.
THE HOTEL KEEPER:

AN ELEGY.

O H, grewsome death, what gar'd ye harl
My auld freend to the ither warl?
Now when ye've toom'd life's leaky barrel
Out to the bung,
A couthy, leal, kind-hearted carle
Was Maister Young.

Ye weel-fed boarders, ane an' a',
Like simmer show'rs let tear-draps fa';
The gong hings silent on the wa'
That aft he rung.
Wha now will you to dinner ca'
Like Maister Young?

He ne'er set doun nae feckless trash,
Nor soup made he—puir useless plash;
An' mooly cheese an' rotten hash
Outside he flung;
We got the worth aye o' our cash
Frae Maister Young.

At dinner time when we gaed in,
Sae cheery wi' the plates he'd rin,
An' brought us corned beef cut thin,
An' fine sliced tongue,
Forby potatoes i' the skin—
Wad Maister Young.
When ither fowk wad laugh an' jeer,
An' thought that I spak braid an' queer,
He aften said he liked to hear
My hameowre tongue;
An' aye I likit to sit near
Auld Maister Young.

When rows got up about the place,
An' drucken chields, that had na grace,
Wad fecht an' tear themsel's like beas',
An' roar'd an' sung,
They cautioned when they saw the face
O' Maister Young.

Wi' lang-tongued chields he didna mix,
Wha fash'd their heads wi' politics,
His hatred at them he did fix
As stiff's a rung,—
They got nae credit for their tricks
Frae Maister Young.

He'd aye things right whate'er th' expense,
An' hated sham an' vain pretence,
An' though at times 't wad gie offense,
To truth he clung,
Regardless o' the consequence,
Did Maister Young.

When July comes, if I am spared,
I'll journey to the lane kirk-yaird
Whaur low he lies, and hae 't declared
That ilka tongue
Can read how truth was virtue's guard
To Maister Young.
THE CALEDONIAN CHIEF.

A LAMENT.

What sad disaster's this befa'n us?
What ill wind now is this that's blawn us?
My heart grows cauld as wintry Janus;
    Preserve us a'!
Our noble Chief—our Coriolanus—
    Our John's awa'.

As bits o' starnies show their light,
When ance the sun is out o' sight,
Sae mony a self-conceited wight
    Now crouse will craw
There's nane to gie their nebs a dicht
    Sin' John's awa'.

Sae skill'd was he in ilka thing,
That when his argument he'd bring,
A' lowse discussion sune took wing,
    As wreaths o' snaw
Evanish at the voice o' Spring—
    But John's awa'.

And if at times purr spite was girnin,
And through the by-laws some were kirkin,
His common sense, like candle burnin',
    Showed clear to a'
The sterling worth that I am mournin'
    Sin' John's awa'.

108
When to the games the club would muster,
An’ Yankees wi’ their fan an’ duster
Like bees around the ring would cluster
   In mony a raw—
He was our center-piece—our lustre—
   But John’s awa’.

When mauchtless athletes whiles would grudge,
An’ gied our Chief a sly bit nudge,
To favor them he wadna budge
   His mind a straw;
He was a siccar well-skilled judge—
   But John’s awa’.

Sae wise was his administration
Fu’ weel I saw our situation,
An’ sair I press’d his nomination,
   But he said na:
He’d haen aneuch o’ exaltation—
   Now John’s awa’.

O Fortune, but you’re sair to blame,
That raised our club to muckle fame,
Then, like ane wauken’d frae a dream,
   A change we saw;—
We’ve tint the best half o’ our name
Sin’ John’s awa’.
THE LECTURER.

AMBITION often leads a child
To unco slips and errors,
Whaur, grim as ony battlefield,
He meets wi' mony terrors,
An' sairly mourns the luckless fate
That met him ere he kent it,
Forgetting that he sought sic gate,
Nor wadna be contented.

Poor Donald, yet I mind him weel,
That time when, bauld as Hector,
He fancied till himsel', poor chiel,
He'd like to gie a lecture;
An' logically showed that mist
Aft dins a sunny radiance,
An' vow'd the only thing he wiss'd
Was juist a list'ning audience.

Now Donald was nae dosent gowk,
Tho' juist a wee conceited,
He understood the ways o' fowk,
An' kittle points debated.
Wi' hair unkamed an' een ablaze,
He was a moral study;
He didna even wear his claes
Like ony common bodie.
Some 'prentice louns, fu' fond o' fun,
Soon laid their heads thegither,
To bring to light that darken'd sun—
Nor did they halt nor swither,
But hired a ha'; an' through the toun
Wi' muckle praise they heez'd him,
An' in the papers up an' doun
Fu' grand they adverteeesed him.

An' hermit-like poor Fraser then
Kept close within his cloister,
As kittle's ony clocking hen,
An' close as ony oyster.
Whiles through the keyhole fowk would keek
In eager expectation,
An' see him stamp, an' hear him speak
In fiery declamation.

Some said when rapt in lofty mood
He utter'd awfu' sayin's,
That blanch'd the cheek, an' chilled the blood,
An' flegg'd the verra weans.
It looked as if he seemed to scan
Some elemental brewin'—
Some dark wrang waft in Nature's plan,
An' then the crash o' ruin.

Poor chield! he little kenn'd the end
O' a' his preparation,
How first his heart gied sic a stend
An' then took palpitation.
How choked his voice, though, truth to tell,
He'd chow'd some sugar-candie;
Forby he'd fortified himsel'
Wi' twa 'r three nips o' brandy
But de'il-ma-care, as soon's he saw
The thrang o' glow'rin faces,
His wits an' courage fled awa',
An' terror took their places.
His chattering teeth an' trembling legs
Were automatic wonder;
An' then a show'r o' rotten eggs
Crashed round his lugs like thunder.

In fury first he tore his hair;
Then gaped his mou' to mutter;
But some ane choked his wild despair
Wi' half-a-pound o' butter—
Then wild he sprauchled round the stage
Like ony Jockie-blindy;
Then dash'd his head in frantic rage
Out through the big ha' window.

Now lat ilk honest man tak' tent,
An' heedna vain ambition;
But try an' dwell at hame content,
An' mind his ain condition.
Should love o' glory lure ye on,
Like Hannibal or Cæsar,
O! for a moment think upon
The doom o' Donald Fraser.
THE PLAY-ACTOR.

ANG PETER was an unco loun,
    A queer catwittit creature;
   An’ nought could please him up or doun,
But rinnin’ to the theatre.
He bore his mither’s wild tirwirrs,
    For sad an’ sair it rack’d her,
To think that weel-born bairn o’ hers
Would turn a waugh play-actor.

But Peter wadna haud nor bind,
    But lived in firm adherence
That some grand chance some day would find
His lang-look’d-for appearance;
And whiles he gaed to sic a height
    Wi’ Shakespeare’s grand creations,
That fowk were deav’d baith day an’ night
Wi’ skelps o’ recitations.

An’ sae it chanced, an’orra rake
    Aft gripp’d in want’s cauld clutches;
Though like a Jew, aye on the make
    In ilka thing he touches,
Had fa’n upon an unco ploy—
    Pur shield, an unco pity—
To play the drama o’ “Rob Roy”
Owreby in Brooklyn City.
Frae far an' near the show fowk cam',
  Puir hungry-looking villians,
An' some would play juist for a dram,
  An' some for twa 'r three shillings;
But Peter sought nae baser kind
  O' monetary clauses,
But offered free his heart an' mind,
  In hopes to win applauses.

And had ye seen him on that night
  When on the stage thegither,
I wat he was a gallant sight
  For marching through the heather;
Wi' tartan kilt an' braid claymore,
  An' buckles glancing rarely,
Like chieftains i' the days o' yore
  That fought for Royal Charlie.

But how can e'er my muse rehearse
  The sad, the sair misfortune,
Or paint that sight in modest verse,
  How when they raised the curtain,
A chield stood winding up the claith
  Like playing on hurdy-gurdies,
An' in rowed Peter's tartan graith,
  An' hung him by the hurdies!

A yell broke frae th' astonished crowd,
  The very sky it rent it;
Some glaiket lassies skirl'd fu' loud.
  An'  ithers near-hand fainted.
Puir Peter squirmed, an' lap an' sprang,
  Just like a new-catch'd haddock,
An' kick'd his heels wi' fearfu' spang
  Amaist like ony puddock.
Some tried to free him frae his plight,
   They cam but little speed o' 't,
Ane broke the handle in his might,
   Juist when they maist had need o' 't.
A chield grown desp'rate i' the case
   Shut aff the big gas meter,
An' brought thick darkness owre the place
   An' some relief to Peter.

Daft gowk! he minds his mither now,
   His stage career is ended;
An' may ilk foolish prank, I trow,
   Thus be at first suspended.
Ye youths wha court the public e'e
   Keep back in canny clearance,
Or some disaster ye may dree
   Like Peter's first appearance.
THE PEDDLER.

Ken ye ought o' Wat the peddler?
   Vow, but he's a graceless vaig;
   Sic a waefu' wanworth meddler
   Weel deserves a hankit craig.

Mony ane he's sair tormented,
   Driven women's heads agee,
Till their dreams wi' Wat are haunted,
   Peddling wi' his puckle tea.

Ilka ane wi' spite he stounds aye,
   Aft their doors they'll tightly lock;
Wat, regardless, goes his rounds aye,
   Reg'lar as an aucht-day clock.

Fient the rap afore he enters,
   Slap the door gangs to the wa',
Bauldly in the villain ventures,
   Peddler, paper-pocks, an' a'.

But the foot o' rude intrusion
   Wanders whiles to sorrow's schule;
And the hand o' retribution
   Wrought the peddler muckle dule.

Jean Macraw, that carefu' creature,
   Cleans her house with fashious fyke,
Night and day—it is her nature—
   Working aye as hard 's ye like.
Now, the chairs and stools she's drilling,
   Ben the house in rankit raw;
Now she's prappit near the ceiling,
   Straikin whitening on the wa'.

Little thought she, worthy woman—
   Busy wi' her mixture het—
O' the waefu' peddler comin',
   Or the droukin he would get.

In he bang'd, the whitening whummlet
   Wi' a sclutter owre his skull;
Backlin's headlang doun he tummlet—
   Buller'd maist like ony bull.

Dazed was he an' fairly doitit,
   Rack'd wi' anguish o' despair,
Sprauchled up, then owre he cloitit,
   Cowpit catmaw doun the stair.

Auld an' young in tumult gather'd,
   Jeannie danc'd an' craw'd fu' crouse,
Wives delighted, blithely blather'd,
   Roars o' laughter shook the house.

Wat, puir chield—nane did lament him—
   Clear'd his een and sought the road,
Aff an' never look'd ahint him,
   Rinnin' like a hunted tod.
A

THE INVENTOR.

YE wha 're to invention gien,
Wha work, like moudywarts, unseen
To bring to light some new machine—
Ye men o' worth,
Your handiwark 's no worth a preen
Frae this henceforth.

A chield has come o' wondrous sleight,
Whase cunning hand and deep insight
Dispels ilk film that dims the flight
O' fancy's ray,
Like vapors fleeting at the light
O' dawning day.

I doubtna some will sneer an' snarl
To hear that ae auld-farrant carl
Has flash'd like ony pouther barrel,
An' shown himsel',
Throughout the hale mechanic warl'
He bears the bell.

O could you see him in his glory—
A sma' room in an upper storey—
His rev'rend pow like winter, hoary—
His kindling een,
An' hear the deep mysterious story
O' ilk machine.
Some work wi’ bauks that shog or swing,
Some rin wi’ weights that wag or hing,
Some hum like bees, some wi’ a spring
   Come thuddin’ roun’,
Some whirr like partricks on the wing
   Wi’ rattling soun’.

An’ then what countless ends an’ uses—
What wonner-wark ilk thing produces—
There’s souters’ awls an’ tailors’ guses
   That work their lane,
An’ rams for dingin doun auld houses
   O’ brick or stane.

What polish’d cranks! what grand confusion!
Like some fantastic wild illusion;
What cantrip skill! what rowth o’ fusion,
   That mak’s nae fyke
To hoist tons by the hunder thousan’,
   As heigh’s ye like!

Forby, what wrangs his skill’s been right’ning!
Nae boilers now exploding, fright’ning;
His patent streaks o’ harness’d lightning
   Does a’ the wark—
Our comfort and our power he’s height’ning
   Out owre the mark.

O grant him soon a noble pension,
And joy beyond a’ comprehension;
And may the tither new invention
   Expand his fame,
Till fowk in rapture blithely mention
   The bodie’s name.
THE CURLER.

SAW ye e'er a vet'ran curler
Mourning owre a broken stane,
When the game is at the thrangst,
Ere the hin'most shot is ta'en?

How the past comes up before him,
Like a gleam o' gowden light!
How the present gathers o'er him,
Like a stormy winter's night!

Doun he sits upon his hunkers—
Lifts the pieces ane by ane;
Mourns the day he cam' to Yonkers—
Vows he's lost a faithfu' frien'!

Doun the rink comes Davie Wallace,
Tears o' pity in his e'e,
Vex'd an' sad his very saul is,
Sic a waesome sight to see.

Weel he kens that throbs o' anguish
Wring the vet'ran's heart in twa;
Davie's feelings never languish—
Davie kens we're brithers a'.

An' he speaks him kindly—"Saunders,
Weel I wat you've fash aneuch;
But let grieving gae to Flanders—
Keep ye aye a calmer sough.

130
Stanes will gang to crokonition,
   Hearts should never gang agee;
Plenty mair in fine condition—
   Come an’ send them to the tee.”

“Wheesht!” says Saunders, “‘dinna mock me—
   Cauld’s the comfort that ye gie;
Mem’ries gather like to choke me
   When ye speak about the tee.

Whaur’s the stane I could depend on?
   Vow my loss is hard to bear!
Stanes an’ besoms I’ll abandon—
   Quat the curling evermair.

Weel I mind the day I dress’d it,
   Five-an’-thirty years sin’ syne,
Whaur on Ailsa Craig it rested—
   Proud was I to ca’ it mine.

Owre the sea, stow’d i’ the bunkers,
   Carefu’ aye I strave to fend,
Little thinking here at Yonkers
   I would mourn its hinder end.

Saw ye aft how ilk beginner
   Watch ’d it aye wi’ envious eye?
Canny aye it chipp’d the winner:—
   Never fail’d to chap an’ lie.

Ne’er ahint the hog score droopin’—
   Ne’er gaed skitin past the tee;
Skips ne’er fash’d themsel’s wi’ soopin’
   When they saw my stane an’ me.”
Round the ither curlers gather,
Some lament wi' serious face;
Some insist it's but a blether—
Aft they've seen a harder case.

Davie lifts the waefu' bodie,
Leads him aff wi' canny care,
Brews a bowl o' reekin toddy,
Bids him drown his sorrows there.

But his heart is like to brak aye,
An' he granes the ither grane,
Gies his head the ither shake aye,
Croons a cronach to his stane.

Sune the toddy starts him hoisin,
Sune he grows anither chiel—
Glorious hameward reels rejoicin'
Wi' his senses in a creel!
THE QUOIT PLAYERS.

What unco chances whiles will fa'
To ony human creature;
How, kick'd about like fortune's ba',
We prove our fickle nature.
While ane will mourn wi' tearfu' e'e
Some dule right unexpeckit,
Anither big wi' joy we'll see
As bright as ony cricket.

Ae time I mind, when joyfu' June
Had brought the wand'ring swallows,
An' sweet ilk feather'd sangster's tune
Rang through the leafy hallows;
An' Nature wore her richest grace,
For flow'rs and blossoms mony
Were scatter'd owre earth's smiling face,
An' a' was blithe an' bonnie.

An' thrangin frae the neib'rin toun
Cam' mony a cheery carl,
As crouse as claimants for a crown
They look'd for a' the warl'.
There mony a weel-skill'd curling skip
Cam' wi' his quoits provided;
For there, that day, the championship
Was gaun to be decided.
An' motts were placed, an' pair an' pair
They stript them for the battle,
An' sune the quoits glanc'd through the air,
An' rang the tither rattle.
An' sudden shouts and loud guffaws
Cam' thick an' thrang thegither,
Confused as ony flock o' craws
Foreboding windy weather.

An' some keep pitching lang an' dour,
Weel-match'd an' teuch 's the widdie;
While ither's canna stand the stour,
But knuckle doun fu' ready.
An' till 't again the victor's fa'
Wi' keener, prouder pleasure;
While rowth o' joy swells ane an' a'
Wi' overflowing measure.

O manly sport in open field,
Life-kindling recreation!
Compared wi' thee what else can yield
Sic glowing animation?
Gin feckless fules wha idly thrang
To city balls an' theatres,
Wad tak' to thee they'd grow sae strang,
They'd look like ither creatures.

But see—they've feckly dune their best,
An' mony a pech it 's ta'en them,
Till twa are left to stand the test,
An' fecht it out atween them;—
Twa rare auld chaps o' muckle fame,
I wat they're baith fu' handy;
Ane muckle Willie was by name,
The tither siccar Sandie.
THE QUOIT PLAYERS.

Now Sandie had an unco kind
O' silent meditation,—
A gath'ring in o' heart an' mind,—
A rapt deliberation;
An' nane daur draw a breath while he Stood fierce as ony Pagan,
Till whizz his weil-aim'd quoit wad flee
Like ony fiery dragon!

But Willie—open-hearted chiel—
He never liked to face it,
Till some tried freend wad cheer him weil,
An' tell him whaur to place it.
An' sic a job was just the thing
That quoiters lik'd to cherish,
An' loud they gar'd the echoes ring
Throughout the neib'rin parish.

An' sair they battled, baith as brave
As game-cocks fechtin' frantic;
The tae shot silent as the grave,
The tither wild 's th' Atlantic.
An' neck an' neck they ran the race,
At ither's heels they rattled,
Until they reach'd that kittle place—
The shots that were to settle 't.

An' sae it was when Sandie stood
In breathless preparation,
Some senseless gowk in frenzied mood,
Owrecome wi' agitation,
Yell'd out—"O Sandie, steady now!
Let's see you play a ringer!"
Distraction rack'd puir Sandie's pow,
An' skill forsook his finger.
Awa' the erring quoit gacd skeugh
Wi' wildly waublin birl,
An' owre a bare pow, sure aneuch,
It strak wi' fearfu' dirl;
A puir newspaper chield it was,
An' aft the fowk did wyte him
For pawning that sad saul o' his
In scraping up an "item."

But fegs, to gie the deil his due,
For facts should ne'er be slighted,
At antrin times by chance somehow
He gar'd the wrang be righted.
An' sae when that erratic quoit
Maist fell'd him wi' a tummle,
Awa' it bounced wi' bev'llin' skyte,
An' on the mott played whummle.

Confusion seized baith auld an' young,
Nae uproar could surmount it;
Some vowed the quoit was fairly flung,
Some said they couldna count it.
The referee owned up at last
'Twas past his comprehension;
Quo' he, "Sic unco kittle cast
Maun bide next year's convention."

Then Willie aimed; while some ane, seized
Wi' wildest quoiting clamor,
Cries "Willie, raise your quoit, man, raise 't,
An' strike this like a hammer!
'Twill ding auld Sandie's i' the yird,
Ne'er let mischance defy you;
You'll win the day, yet, tak' my word,
Gude luck will ne'er gae by you."
Encouraged, Willie wing'd his quoit
Fair as a rocket spinning,
While ilka ane in wild delight
Were to the far end rinnin';
When some rough chield, in reckless speed,
Tramp'd on his neibor's corns;
When half a dozen heels owre head
Fell like a pock o' horns.

The quoit played thud, a murd'rous yell
Proclaimed a new disaster;
Some cried for mercy whaur they fell,
Some cried for dacklin' plaister.
Ane vowed the quoit had broke his back,
'Twa spak' o' waur distresses;
Anither said he got a whack
That crack'd a pair o' glasses.

Some gabbled loud, some laugh'd like mad:
Nae wild discordant rabble
E'er sic supreme dominion had
Sin' at the Tower o' Babel.
But sweet accord cam' in at last,
An' ilka honest billie
Agreed that medals should be cast
For Sandie an' for Willie.

Like royal heroes, hame they cam'
In glorious glee thegither,
An' pledg'd their friendship owre a dram
O' punch wi' ane anither.
But nae like kings wha seldom care
For chields when they've mischieved them,
They baith watch'd weel the sick an' sair,
Till healing Time relieved them.
Lang may they thrive, while ilk ane wears
His honors nobly earn'd;
Fraye persevering pluck like theirs
A lesson might be learn'd.
May quoiters' joys be mair an' mair,
Unvex'd by sorrow's harrows:
Sic hearty social chaps, I swear,
I've never met their marrows.
WHEN clansmen gather'd to the games
O' Philadelphia, man,
What roused their patriotic flames
Mair bauld than e'er ye saw, man?
What was 't that fired their heads wi' glee,
An' kept their hearts in true tune?
Nocht but the matchless melody
O' Angus Rankin's new tune.

O how he made the welkin ring
Wi' music's sweetest numbers,
Till rocks an' woods an' ilka thing
Seem'd wauken'd frae their slumbers.
The hurricane o' notes ran on
Like spates o' rowin' rivers,
Harmonious to the ringing drone
An' graced wi' semiquavers.

Chief Cochrane gaz'd—that modest chIELD—
In silent meditation,
Till like a hero in the field
He caught the inspiration.
He flash'd a claymore frae its sheath,
Quo' he: "I'd face wi' pleasure
The very gaping jaws o' death
To sic a rousing measure."
Big Bertram then cuist aff his shoon
   An' grippet Johnnie Shedden;
Said he: "Maun, that's a famous tune,
   It beats the 'Tinkler's Weddin'.'"
They yokit to the Hieland Fling,
   Wi' shanks baith swauk an' dweeble,
An' heating to the wark—by jing'!
   They danc'd a double-treble!

Then Ross an' Gibb an' Robb an' Steele,
   Were fidgin' fain to see them,—
They up an' danc'd a foursome reel,
   An' auld an' young danc'd wi' them;
Sic wild delight, sic gladsome glee,
   Led on by Rankin's chanter,
Ne'er daz'd the glance o' mortal e'e,
   Sin' drucken Tam o' Shanter.

The games gaed on, ilk bauld athlete
   Sune felt the air entrancing,
Their blood boiled up wi' fervent heat,
   Their nerves in frenzy dancing,
They mark'd, as Angus proudly pass'd,
   His martial mien and figure;
An' gather'd frae his warlike blast
   A mair than mortal vigor!

When Johnston jump'd maist five feet-three,
   'Mid bursts o' admiration;
An' clansmen gied him three times three
   In wild congratulation,
Quo' he: "I feel like Mercury,
   Inspired by sweet Apollo;
My feet are wing'd wi' melody
   Frae Rankin's bagpipe solo!"
When, like a rocket through the air,
Ross sent the hammer spinnin',
An' fowk dumfounder'd here an' there
To clear the gate were rinnin';
Sae clean had Angus turn'd his croon
Wi' music's magic glamour,
He near-hand kill'd a nigger loun,
Sae rash he threw the hammer.

When Robertson cam to the scratch,
An' vow'd he'd vault wi' ony,
He thocht na he would meet his match
In Irish Jack Maloney.
Will kent the pipes could ne'er inspire,
An Irishman to glory,
But fegs, Jack's mither's great grandsire
Cuist peats in Tobermory.

Some liked the games, some liked the beer,
An' a' were blithe an' happy;
They spent the day in social cheer,
An' endit wi' a drappie.
But a' agreed, as it appears,
The day had pass'd but too soon,
An' ne'er had music charm'd their ears
Like Angus Rankin's new tune.

Then fill your bags, ye pipers a',
An' get your drones in true tune,
An' try your chanters wi' a blaw,
O' Angus Rankin's new tune.
This fact I'll hold it ev'rywhere,
An' nocht can mak' me bow down,
No martial air can e'er compare
Wi' Angus Rankin's new tune!
THE DANDY DANCER.

BLITHE Brooklyn lads on Hallowe’en,
They cut a gallant figure, O!
But feint a clansman there was seen
Like worthy Tam MacGregor, O!
Martial Tam MacGregor, O!
Rousing Tam MacGregor, O!
Baith big an’ braw, an’ blithe an’ a’
Is swanky Tam MacGregor, O!

When music made the rafters ring,
An’ ilk an’ danc’d wi’ vigor, O!
Nane yarkit up the Hieland fling
Like souple Tam MacGregor, O!
Skipping Tam MacGregor, O!
Shuffling Tam MacGregor, O!
I’m perfect sure nane fill’d the floor
Like lang-legg’d Tam MacGregor, O!

Douce Andrew Lamb he stroked his beard,
An’ glower’d wi’ awesome rigor, O!
“Preserve’s!” quo’ he, “I’m getting fear’d
At muckle Tam MacGregor, O!
Stand back frae Tam MacGregor, O!
Mak’ room for Tam MacGregor, O!
Or by my fegs he’ll brak’ our legs,
Will loupin’ Tam MacGregor, O!”
The bonnie lasses glancin' up
    Aft wiss'd that they were bigger, O!
For weel they liked the manly grip
    O' gallant Tam MacGregor, O!
    Waltzing Tam MacGregor, O!
    Swinging Tam MacGregor, O!
A hand-breadth guid owre a' he stood
    Did lofty Tam MacGregor, O!

Now be ye rich or be ye puir,
    Or be ye black 's a nigger, O!
A hearty social friend I'm sure
    Ye'll find in Tam MacGregor, O!
    Hurrah! for Tam MacGregor, O!
    Here's to ye, Tam MacGregor, O!
The social man's the noble man,
    An' that's leal Tam MacGregor, O!
THE CHIEFTAIN.

HAE ye heard the joyful news
That fill our hearts wi' muckle glee?
An' waukens up my homely muse
To sing o' ane frae owre the sea.
I wat we've miss'd him unco sair
Frae 'mang the social chaps we ken;
But ane an' a' rejoice ance mair
Sin' social Geordie's back again.

Social Geordie's back again,
Social Geordie's back again,
Gae sound the news wi' micht an' main,
Social Geordie's back again.

O what could e'er hae gar't him gang
Awa' frae 'mang the chieftains a'?
When kilted clansmen proudly thrang
In open field or gath'rin' ha',
He aye was foremost in his graith
Amang the plaided Highland men;
But blithe are we when, free frae scaith,
Our noble Chieftain's back again.

O could ye hear his wondrous crack
O' broomy knowes an' briery dells,
How blithe the fancy wanders back
Owre mountains red wi' heather bells.
The scented flowers, the melodie
That graces ilka Scottish glen,
Comes brichter on the memory's e'e,
Sin' social Geordie's back again.
THE BLATE WOOER.

Rab MacCraw began to woo
Ha, ha, the wooing o’t.
Mary Ann was kind an’ true,
Ha, ha, the wooing o’t.
Rab was blate an’ unco shy,
Glower’d fu’ fain an’ aft would sigh,
Let guid chances aft gang by,
Ha, ha, the wooing o’t.

Mary Ann would smile sae sweet,
Ha, ha, the wooing o’t.
Rab would look as he would greet,
Ha, ha, the wooing o’t.
Mary Ann would blithely sing,
Joke to Rab like onything,
But feint the smile frae Rab could bring,
Ha, ha, the wooing o’t.

He that runs may brawly read,
Ha, ha, the wooing o’t.
Love that’s dumb will ne’er come speed,
Ha, ha, the wooing o’t.
“Shall I mind a coof sae blate,”
Quo’ she, an’ changed her love to hate,
Cuist her een anither gate,
Ha, ha, the wooing o’t.
Up there spak' a brisker man,
       Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
"Will ye tak' me, Mary Ann?"
       Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
Sune they spread their marriage feast.
Rab dumfounder'd at sic haste,
Glower'd as if he'd seen a ghaist,
       Ha, ha, the wooing o't.

Now the moral's plainly set,
       Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
Strike the iron while it's het,
       Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
Or like Rab as ye hae seen,
Some brisker lad may come between,
An' ye may lie and gaunt your lane,
       Ha, ha, the wooing o't.
THE SUFFERING CITIZEN.

AN ELEVATED RHYME.

It was a suffering citizen
Whose life was full of jars,
Until he came to dwell beside
The Elevated cars.

For night and day his shrewish wife
Would rail in brazen tone,
Until this very wretched man
Was very woe-begone.

But when the rattling engines pass'd,
And thundering echoes rung,
This tiresome lady was at last
Compelled to hold her tongue.

Or if her burning bursts of speech
Prolonged their ceaseless blast,
He could not hear a single word
Until the cars had pass'd.

And when her fractured parts of speech
Began again to stir,
The steam would hiss, the brakes would screech,
And put a stop to her.
Till now there's not a meeker dame
   In Gotham's busy town,
With all her eloquent fires
   Completely broken down.

While he, in transports of delight,
   A rush of gladness feels,
Since all his woes are crush'd beneath
   The clash of iron wheels.

And though at first this jostling pair,
   The railroad did condemn,
Its jarring tumult has become
   A source of peace to them.

And also proves the moral truth,
   That he was wondrous wise
Who said that troubles often are
   But blessings in disguise.
THE MATCH-MAKING LUCKIE.

KENT a Scotch wife fat an’ crouse
   As ony weel-fed chuckie;
   An’ social mirth aft graced the house
O’ that auld, canty Luckie;
An’ foul or fair, or late or air,
   In spite o’ wind and weather,
This Luckie still worked wi’ a will
To bring young fowk thegither.

An’ whiles ’t was parties at her house,
   An’ whiles ’t was singing classes;
An’ whiles ’t was dancings blithe an’ crouse
   Amang the lads an’ lasses.
The blatest pair that entered there
   They never could dishearten her;
The blate and cauld grew blithe and bauld,
   An’ learned to kiss their partner.

When first we met, “My lad,” quo’ she,
   “We’ve lasses braw an’ plenty;
Tak’ tent an’ lea yersel’ wi’ me,
   I’m sure you’re twa-an’-twenty;
An’ time it is ye kenn’d what ’t was
   To taste conjugal blisses—
To hae a wife to cheer your life
   Wi’ rowth o’ sappy kisses.’
Quo' I, "Auld Luckie, bide at hame,
An' mind your man an' bairns;
Gude faith, they say, ye might think shame
O' some o' your concerns.
There's bonnie Sam, an' dancing Tam,
Ye pledg'd them clever kimmers—
They see owre late their waeifu' fate,
They've baith got lazy limmers."

She stamp'd, she raised her open loof,
She vow'd by a' that's holy,
Her happy matches aye were proof
'Gainst care an' melancholy.
"There's some," quo' she, "that's come to me
As thrawn as cankert littlins,
Now ye can kythe them sweet an' blithe
As ony pair o' kittlins."

She held her faith, she preach'd her creed
Wi' apostolic ardor,
An' aye the mair that she cam' speed
She played her cards the harder.
Some scoffers thought that she was nought
But some auld devil's buckie;
But priests in black fu' sweetly spak
That grand match-making Luckie.

At last, O sirs, she chang'd her craw,
That aft had welcom'd mony;
An' now 't was, "Lasses, bide awa'
Frae my ain laddie, Johnnie;
Nor glow'rin' an' gape, nor set your cap
For my wee bonnie Tammie;
The blind might see, as lang's they've me,
They'll aye bide wi' their mammie."

But Jock and Tam, as quick 's a shot,
They settled up the matter;
They married, an' sic jades they got—
The least that's said the better.
Puir Luckie swat, puir Luckie grat,
An' pale she grew, an' thinner;
An' lang she blabb'd, an' aft she sabb'd,
Like ony startled sinner.

Now friends tak' tent an' keep aloof
Frae a' sic intermeddling,
Nae gude can come aneath ane's roof
Wi' dancing and wi' fiddling.
An' smacks galore ahint the door,
Whatever be their nature,
May turn as dowff as Luckie's howff,
That auld match-making creature.

An' ye whase rosy hopes are lit
By youth's fires blithe an' bonnie,
O walk ye aye wi' tentie fit—
Life's dubs are deep an' mony.
Your sweet desires, true love's fond fires
Keep close as ony buckie;
An' aye bide back, nor counsel tak'
Frae nae match-making Luckie.
THE CAVALIER.

'Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself,
And falls on the other side.'

—Shakespeare.

THERE was a gallant prick-the-louse,
   Fu' fond o' martial glory,
   Wha liked na sitting i' the house
   To hear an auld wife's story;
But let him out in gaudy graith,
   Then firm as famed Achates,
He'd think within himsel'—guid faith,
   He was nae sma' potatoes.

An' when processions deav'd the place,
   Wi' fifing an' wi' drumming,
Amang the foremost ye might trace
   That martial tailor coming.
For wark he aye had some excuse
   An' put fowk in a swither,
He might as weel hae left his goose
   An' lapbrod a' thegither.

But whiles when things come till a height,
   An' a' 's as gleg's a wumble,
Conceit will get an unco dicht
   An' pride will tak a tumble;
An' sighs an' sabs will wring the face,
   An' conscience turn reviler;
An' waes me! here's an unco case—
   This military tailor.

143
Some grand turn there out was to be,
    Nae ane had e’er seen larger;
An’ nought could please that tailor’s e’e
    But mount him on a charger;
Though weel I wat, wi’ due regard
    To sic a feckless bodie,
He would hae been far better sair’d
    Upon a cadger’s cuddie.

But fegs! when mounted firm an’ fair,
    Sic unco lift it lent him
That had his grannie seen him there,
    Poor soul! she wadna kent him—
Wi’ hat deck’d up wi’ gamecock’s tail
    That in the breeze was dancing,
An’ sword that swung like ony flail
    An’ spangled bauldric glancing.

O had the tailor’s foot been set
    Upon a nest o’ vipers,
’Twere better fate than when he met
    That squad o’ Highland pipers,
Whase drones blew out a fearfu’ blast
    An’ scream’d ilk piercing chanter,
Juist as the tailor bobbit past,
    Fu’ gracefu’ at a canter.

Awa’ the horse sprang wild wi’ fright
    Like some mad spectral vision;
An apple cart first felt his might—
    It was a sad collision.
Whate’er stood in his furious track
    Was knock’d amaist to flinders,
The air was black wi’ stour an’ wrack,
    O’ barrels fill’d wi’ cinders.
The tailor prayed, the tailor yell'd,
    In dreadfu' consternation;
But onward aye the charger held
    In awesome desperation.
The fowk ran here, the fowk ran there,
    Wi' fear ilk lip did quiver,
"Preserve us!" raise in wild despair,
    "He's making for the river!"

An' sae it was in wild career,
    An' galloping an' prancing,
The puir demented cavalier
    Beheld his end advancing;
But when they reach'd the auld dry dock
    Fill'd fu' wi' mony a schutter,
The horse stood still wi' sudden shock,
    An' dump'd him i' the gutter!

There let him rest his weary banes,
    In waefu'-like dejection,
While through his mony sighs an' granes,
    Fowk hear this wise reflection:
"Oh, sirs! on foot I'll gang my road,
    Till life's last thread be clippit,
An' sit me doucely on my brod,
    Though I grow horny-hippit."

An' you, ye pipers, ane an' a',
    O pause an' weel consider,
An' mak' your pipes fu' laigh to blaw,
    Or stop them a' thegither;
Ilk fearsome groan frae ilk a drone,
    There's nought on earth that 's viler;
Then see the dool ye've brought upon
    That military tailor.
THE MINISTER-DAFT.

JOCK WABSTER, o' Girvan, cam' owre here to bide,
But he cared na for ferlies a flee;
But to hear a' the preachers—O that was his pride,
For an unco douce body was he.
A pillar in Zion he'd been frae his youth,
An' deep draughts o' doctrine he'd quaffed;
An' sae schuled he'd aye been in the real gospel truth,
Ye'd ne'er thought he'd gae minister-daft.

When to Gotham he cam', preserve's what a steer!
Ilk Sabbath, at break o' the dawn,
He up an' awa' a new preacher to hear,
Whaur gowpens o' logic were sawn.
Three times i' the day, and aftentimes four,
He listen'd to clerical craft,
Till at last his een had sic an unco like glow'r,
You could see he was minister-daft.

To Beecher he gaed, wha vowed that the de'il,
Was nought but some auld-warld blether!
To Talmage he tramp'd, wha proved juist as weel
Fowk were a'gaun to Satan thegither!
Then Ormiston showed how the foreordained few
Were the only true heavenly graft.
Jock couldna' see how a' their theories were true,
Although he was minister-daft.
Then Frothingham showed him—that lang-headed chap—
How fowk were maist gomerals a';
How priests an' how clergy juist baited a trap
To lead puir silly bodies awa';
How creeds an' how kirks an' a' siccan gear
Were as frail as an auld rotten raft.
Some fowk may dispute it, but ae thing was clear,
Jock Webster was minister-daft!

Stil he tramp'd an' he trudg'd, an' hearken'd an' stared,
Till at last, on a day it befel,
He heard a Scotch ranter, wha baudly declared
He had Heaven juist a' to himsel'
Whaur he an' his half-dizzen bodies would bide
In spite o' the devil's wrang waft,
While the brunstane consumed a' the earth in its pride,
No forgetting the minister-daft.

How he stampit and reeng'd amang lions an' lambs!
An' beasts wi' big horns an' a'
An' he-goats, an' dragons, an' deevils, an' rams,
An' cantrips cuist up in a raw!
But the upshot was this, that Jock he thought shame;
Now doucely he plies his ain craft,
An' on Sabbaths he reads owre the gude book at hame;
So he's nae langer minister-daft.
THE SPIRITUALIST.

Glendower—I can call spirits from the vasty deep.
Hotspur—Why, so can I, or so can any man;
   But will they come when you do call for them?
   —Shakespeare.

Langsyne, when Tam an’ me were mates,
   An’ wrought an’ swat thegither,
   O, mony kittle, keen debates
   We had wi’ ane anither.
An’ aye Tam took a stalwart stand
   On mystic speculation,
An’ dwelt upo’ the spirit land
   Wi’ muckle meditation.

’Twas strange to hear him spread his views
   In unsubstantial theories;
How spirits hover’d round like doos,
   Or danc’d about like peeries.
How whiles, beyond frail man’s control,
   They dwelt like bumbees bykit;
Or whiles they wing’d frae pole to pole,
   Like thought—as fast’s ye like ’t.

I bade him doubt sic unco things,
   Till he some proof could render;
He bade me tak’ the Book o’ Kings,
   An’ read the Witch o’ Endor.

148
“An’ doubt ae word o’ God,’” quo’ he,
“As weel doubt a’ the rest o’it.”
An’ facts are facts—’tween you an’ me,
Tam rather had the best o’it.

Till ae daft nicht when Tam an’ me
Sat cheek an’ jowl thegither,
An’ something he would let me see
Would clear up ilka swither.
Quo’ he—‘Juist speer if ghaists be here,
Though nae man’s e’e can see them;
I vow to fate I’ve learned the gate.
To haud a parley wi’ them.”

“Ah, Tam,” quo I, “I’ve mourned the loss
O’ frends baith guid an’ mony;
Some worn wi’ age an’ warldly cross,
Some young, an’ blithe, an’ bonnie.
But nane e’er bravelier took my part,
Nae freendship blossom’d riper;
Nane had a warmer, kindlier heart
Than Donald Roy, the piper.

“O, aft when weary wark was dune
Amang the woods a-roaming,
Fu’ mony a sweet an’ blithesome tune
Waked echoes i’ the gloaming.
An’ rapt was ilka list’ning ear,
While Donald piped his numbers;
Now green’s the sod that haps his bier
Sin’ cauld in death he slumbers.
"But ere he dee'd he left to me
A tune that ne'er was printed;
It struck a wild, heroic key,
But, like a gowk, I tint it.
O, will ye speer if he be here—
I'll never dare to doubt it—
If ye'll wreath doun that martial tune
Or tell me where I put it."

Tam tried to look like some auld seer,
As weel as he was able,
An' mummlet something laigh an' queer,
Then grippit at the table.
An', O preserve 's! I'm juist as sure
As that my heart gaed thumpin',
It raised its hint legs aff the floor,
An' syne began a-jumpin'!

Sometimes it quiver'd i' the air,
Wi' mony an eerie wobble,
Sometimes it shoggled here an' there
Like ony saumont cobble!
An' aye Tam spelt his A, B, C's,
An' marked them doun in batches;
An' spun a screed out by degrees,
Like telegraph dispatches.

"He's here," quo' Tam, "but deil tak' me
If I can weel command him:
He spells sae unco queer, ye see,
I dinna understand him.
His words are like some droll hotch-potch
O' Hebrew or Italic;
An' are ye sure he crackit Scotch,
Or did he jabber Gaelic?"
"O wheesht!" quo’ I; "gin he be here
I’ll speak an invocation:
O, Donald, if this earthly sphere
Is now thy habitation,
O dinna wing your airy flight
Back through the blissful portals
Before you throw some glint o’ light
On poor unhappy mortals.

"O gin thy voice, that aye was sweet
An’ gentle as a woman’s
Could some celestial news repeat,
I’d hail the heavenly summons;
Or gin thy pipes are still in tune,
An’ still thy pride an’ pleasure,
O bring the echoes frae aboon
In some seraphic measure!"

Like thunder-claps whase sudden shock
Aft rattles a’ the dwallin’,
Wild, weird, unearthly shrieks out-broke
Aneath the very hallan!
Wi’ piercing screams an’ awesome groans
The very air wa’ bizzin’;
It sounded like a hundred drones,
An’ chanters by the dizzen!

Tam’s hair stood up, an’ strange to see,
Ilk e’e sprang frae its socket;
He glower’d an awesome glower at me,
Then darted like a rocket.
Then three times round the room he ran,
The chairs an’ stools a’ coupin;
Then for the window sprang, puir man,
As if he thought o’ loupin’.
I tauld puir Tam the hale affair
   How it was a' pretenses;
How twa 'r three pipers hearkened there,
   To bring him to his senses.
An' lang they blethered owre a dram,
   An' cheered Tam up wi' toddy;
But fowk remarked frae that day Tam
   Was quite an altered bodie.

Nae mair his mind is in the mirk,
   Wi' ghaists he doesna daidle;
He's grown a deacon o' the kirk,
   An' passes round the ladle.
An' though some think that Calvin's creed
   Is cauld an' warsh as drammock,
Tam kens it clears his gloomy head,
   An' suits his thrawart stammack.

O ye wha your ain gates would gang
   On this truth keep reflectin'—
The wayward will aye wanders wrang,
   Dool comes ye're no expectin'.
O, keep the faith that mony a Scot
   Won noble martyr's wreath in;
The covenanted kirk ye've got
   Aye place your 'biding faith in.
THE FEAST OF MACTAVISH.

MERRY were the feasts at hame,
    Unmixed wi' care or dool,
Lany syne in Angus braes when we
    Were laddies at the schule;
An' aye the blithest o' them a'—
    The merry feast at Yule.

But mony years hae pass'd sin' syne,
    And unco feasts I've seen:
I've dined where gowden chandeliers
    Hae dazzled baith my een;
An' supp'd beneath the moon an' stars
    Far in the forest green.

But a' the feasts that e'er I had,
    At hame or far awa',
Or ever thought or dream'd about
    Or heard about or saw,
That unco feast MacTavish made
    I think it crown'd them a'.

Lang had MacTavish wrought and tramp'd
    O wre mony a drumlie dub,
To start in some wee Western toun
    A Caledonian Club,
An' gather clansmen round himsel',
    Like spokes around a hub.

153
He shed incessant owre them a'
   The light o' wit an' sense,
An' fann'd their patriotic fires
   Without a recompense,
Except the loud applause that hailed
   His bursts o' eloquence.

An' aye his head was pang'd sae fu'
   O' logic and o' lear,
His brither Scots look'd up to him
   Wi' pride an' holy fear;
An' aye the word was when they met—
   "MacTavish, tak' the chair."

At last MacTavish spread a feast
   O' dainties rich an' rare;
An' a' the big fowk o' the toun—
   The Shirra an' the mayor,
A Judge, sax Councilmen, forbye
   Twa editors—were there.

The ha' was deck'd in rainbow hues,
   The pipes began to play;
An' mony a kilted Scot was there
   In tartan's grand array;—
An' proud they were, for ye maun ken
   It was the Auld Yule Day.

The grace was said, the feast began
   Wi' kail baith het an' thin,
An' scowder'd bannocks, birselt brown,
   An' tatties i' the skin.
"Clean out your plates," MacTavish cried,
   "An' bring the haggis in."
Wild clamor made the welkin ring;
The bodies seem'd as glad
As if the promised dish had been
The only bite they had;
Like shipwreck'd waifs that hail a sail,
They cheer'd an' cheer'd like mad!

I wat it was an awesome sight,
Grim, grewsome-like, an' black:
The skin hung flypin' doun the sides
In wrinkles lang an' slack,
Like Jumbo hurklin' doun to get
The bairnies on his back.

O, then MacTavish smack'd his lips,
An' glower'd wi' hungry e'e!
"First pass the glorious dish amang
Th' invited guests," said he;
"Be thankfu', freends, there is aneuch
For them an' you an' me.

"Gie double thanks, for there's a dish
Might mak a sick man weel;
Whaever eats his fill o' that
Might dance a foursome reel;
O grand it is when ilka sup
Melts in your mou' like jeel!"

They mump'd like rabbits at the stuff,
Their chafts gied mony a twine;
The Mayor wash'd twa 'r three spoonfu's doun
Wi' waughts o' Adam's wine;
The editors for ance agreed,
An' said they liked it fine.
"An' fine it is," MacTavish cried,
Wi' muckle mirth an' glee;—
"That's just the kind o' halesome food
My mither made to me
Langsyne, when I was herding kye
Beside the water Dee.

"O if we had this ilka day
We'd stand as stieve's a dyke!
The waefu' weight o' weary wark
Would be but little fyke;
An' mony a creature wadna be
Sae lantern-chafted like.

"Frae this day, henceforth, and for aye—
Bear witness while I speak—
I'll eat nae skelps o' Texan steers
That's frizzled i' the reek;
I'll hae a haggis just like this
Made ready ilka week."

An' down upon his chair at last
The bauld MacTavish sat,
An' took a spoonfu' o' the dish;
Then, like a cankert cat,
His whiskers bristled i' the air,
He glower'd, and fuff'd, and spat!

"Preserve 's!" MacTavish wildly cried,
"Whaur is that dosent doilt,
Whase idiotic want o' sense
Our glorious feast has spoilt?
He's warm'd the haggis by mistak',—
The ane that wasna boilt!
"O mony a haggis I hae seen,
Bait muckle anes an' sma',
Some saft as cruds, some hard as brods
Cut by a circ'lar saw;
But never dream'd I'd live to see
Fowk eat a haggis raw!

"But, freends, though unco sair it is
To bear this sad mistake,
A gleam o' glory gilds us yet,
An' fient the dool we'll make:
Wha wadna suffer pains and pangs
For dear auld Scotland's sake?"

Some cheer'd an' lauch'd, some growl'd an' glunch'd,
Some said 'twas nae that ill;
Some proved how hard it is to be Convinced against your will;
But a' agreed to droun their waes
In stoups o' barmy yill.

An' ye whae'er shall hear o' this,
O pass na lightly by,
But learn to bide an' haud your weesht,
An' mind an' watch your eye,
An' no be roosing unco things
Before ye taste an' try.

An' you wha fain wad be genteeel,
O mak' this maxim plain—
It's wiser whiles to mak' an' speak
Opinions o' your ain,
Than blindly tak' the bauldest thought
O' ony mortal brain.
THE WESTERN WAIF.

He sat in the court where the prisoners sit,
    And his face was haggard and grim;
    And a hundred curious, eager eyes
    Look'd stern and glared at him;
Nor friend had he in that motley throng
    Save his sad-eyed brother Jim.

And ever as link by link they brought
    The story from near and far,
And ever as darker the picture grew
    With the shadow of bolt and bar,
He look'd for Jim as the mariner looks
    For the light of the polar star.

At last when the Judge had turn'd to the waif
    And ask'd if he'd aught to say,
He rose to his feet, nor ever a trace
    Of fear did his face betray;
But he look'd at the Judge and he look'd at the throng
    In a manly kind of a way.

"I won't go back on the things I've done
    Or the way that they might be put;
I won't say many are worse'n me,
    Or some o' you folks might scoot;
I won't squeal now that you've got me fast,—
    I ain't that kind o' galoot."
"But s'pos’n' I'd bin of a different stamp—
A tip-top kind of a lad,
That work'd like a nigger from morning to night,
And never once went to the bad,
But come to the scratch like a man ev'ry time—
I wonder what thanks I’d have had?

"There's Jim—look at Jim!—he's done the square thing,
No man can say nothing to him:
He's just made up o' the whitest o' stuff,
An' filled choke up to the brim;
You may talk an talk till the Fourth o' July,
But there isn't a spot upon Jim.

"When the Rebs crawled out from the old striped flag,
Jim shouldered his gun—you bet!—
He didn't hang back like them big bounty chaps,
That stay for all they could get:—
Why, Judge—if them Rebs a-hadn't caved in
Our Jim would been fightin' 'em yet!

"For down at the battle o' Shiloh, Judge,
When Jim was a-waving his fist,
A grape shot came with a whizz an' a bang!
An' took it clean off by the wrist:
Jim only smiled in his ord'nar' way,
And said it would hardly be miss'd.

"And the blacksmith made him an iron hook,
And Jim kept his place in the line,
And there wasn't a man in the old Ninth corps
Could drop you a Reb as fine;
For Jim, you see, had an iron nerve,—
They warn't all shook like mine.
"When Jim came back—did they give him a place—
A good, fat office, or such?
No!—Jim ain’t the kind that goes snookin’ around
To see where he’ll pick up a crutch;
And there’s nobody looks for the likes o’ Jim
To give him a lift—not much!

"But Jim don’t ask no odds off a man
Although he’s short on a limb,
And maybe Jim ain’t a-caring to hear
That I’m speakin’ this way about him;
Say, Judge you orter let up on a man
That’s gotten a brother like Jim!

"And s’pos’n’ I’ve done what I ortent a done,
And the State’s got the bulge upon me:
The State hasn’t done what it orter a done
To a good un like Jim, d’ye see;—
Say, Judge—God pardons the sinner because Christ died upon Calvary!"

Then an angel of mercy seem’d somehow
To dwell in each pitying look,
And the Judge called out to the throng for Jim
To come from his distant nook;
And there wasn’t a man in the crowd but came
And wrung Jim by his iron hook!

And they aren’t straitlaced in those Western courts,
And nobody cared to know
If the law said this or the law said that,
But they cried to give him a show;
And so for the worth of the noble Jim
They let the wild waif go.
THE POACHER.

Who is he that comes sedately,
Bearded, muffled, dark and stately,
With a rapid stride advancing
And his keen eyes sideways glancing,—
Glitt'ring like an unsheath'd dagger,
And a wild, defiant swagger
In his air, and all around him
Wild-like as the wilds that found him
Coming from their lone recesses—
Wanderer of the wilderness?

Well did ev'ry rustic know him:
Many a kindness did they show him,
When from midnight watchings dreary,
He sought shelter, wet and weary.
Who that knew his wild vocation
Held him but in admiration?
Who that heard his direful doings,—
Escapades from hot pursuings,—
Saw his furr'd and feather'd plunder,—
Loved but still to gape and wonder?
Marvel at his tales, and listen
Till their very eyes would glisten.
For it seem'd as Nature meant it,
Freedom's cause he represented;
And his life's eventful story
Seem'd to them illum'd with glory.

161.
How good fortune ne'er forsook him;
How disaster ne'er o'ertook him;
How in ev'ry clime and season
He succeeded, pass'd all reason.
Oft the sportsmen in a bevy
Volley'd at the scatter'd covey;
And for many a wasted cartridge
Home they brought a single partridge.
Tam, from some dark den or cavern,
Or from some warm, wayside tavern,
Ventur'd forth as daylight darken'd;
Felt his way and watch'd and hearken'd:
Went by lone wilds unfrequented,
Knew the place each creature haunted,
Knew their various calls, and whether
Spread apart or grouped together,
He would find his way unto them;
And, as if dumb instinct drew them,
One by one found resting places
In his greatcoat's deep recesses;
And the dawning daylight found him
With his booty strung around him,
Mix'd 'mong folks of sober paces
Walking to the market places.

Yet with all his easy gaining,
Anxious care with him remaining,
Ever in his mind ran riot
Through dark regions of unquiet,—
Regions sown with seeds of folly,
Growing weeds of melancholy.
And his life's first fond delusion
Led to labyrinths of confusion;
Law had set her eyes upon him;
Loosed her hungry beagles on him;
And for all his vain parading
Life to him was masquerading,—
Outward—bright and bravely showing
Inward—dark and darker growing.

One fond hope his fancy treasured,
Gleaming o'er life's waste unmeasured,
Radiant as a light before him
Shedding sweetest influence o'er him
Love had lit its fires within him;
Love it was alone could win him
From life's wild and wayward byways
Back to its well-beaten highways.

Oft when through the wilds he rambled,
Or by cliffs and crags he scrambled,
Or lay hid in darken'd corry,
Visions came, as if a glory
Touched the dark earth's face with whiteness;
Lit the blacken'd air to brightness;
Roused the man to hope and feeling;
While in beauty there revealing
To his ravish'd soul the splendor
Of the bright eyes, sweet and tender,
And the face that glowed serenely,
And the form so fair and queenly
Of the Deeside Lass thrill'd through him;
And the happy thought came to him
That in some calm nook together,
Some green glen beside the heather,
Love and joy and peace would bind them,
Happiness contented find them.
Never had his hopes been spoken,
Never was love's silence broken:
But he had begun to woo her
As his dark eyes soften'd to her
When they met by field or meadow,
Met and pass'd like light and shadow;
Felt her presence like caressing
Linger with him like a blessing.
THE DEESIDE LASS.

"What hand but would a garland cull
For thee who art so beautiful?"
—Wordsworth.

The lass was bonnie, and the Muse
Knows hardly how or where to choose
From things in heaven, or earth, or air,
To match a lass so bright and fair.
She was not just like heavenly things,
Whose azure eyes and pearly wings
Are only meant for realms of bliss
And not for weary worlds like this.
Yet there was something in her eyes
So sweet, so calm, so heavenly wise,
Unfathom'd in its depth it seem'd:
A ceaseless fount of joy, it gleam'd
Mysterious as the stars and free
From shadows as a sunlit sea,
Forever flashing, and the while
Lit up with an eternal smile.
Her wondrous wealth of golden hair
Was lit with sunshine here and there.
Her glowing face in rosy youth
Breath'd innocence and trustful truth.
Upon her forehead, broad and bare,
The calmness of the summer air
Seem'd resting as in perfect peace;
There mortal passions seemed to cease

165
Their restless fires, and, shining there,
The mind dwelt as a maiden's prayer,
All pure in cloudless innocence,
All strong in keen intelligence.
What though her shapely arm and hand
By toil 'neath summer suns were tann'd;
What though her rustic, homely dress
Showed labor's honest humbleness;
There dwelt about her noble form
The grace that grows in wind and storm,
And gathers strength from ev'ry blast,
Till fixed in stately form at last
It standeth like the waving pine,
Serenely in the calm sunshine,
Serenely when the tempests lower
It stands in beauty and in power.
A ribbon bound her flowing hair
Like Hebe bright or Juno fair.
And such her form and artless grace,
And such her sweet and noble face,
That one beholding might divine
She would have graced the fabled Nine
Who dwelt on famed Parnassus hill,
And drank Castalia's crystal rill.
Thus walk'd she on the velvet grass,
That bright-eyed, bonnie Deeside lass.
THE MOURNFU' MITHER.

LEEZE me on a mither's love,
Sae steady aye and strang;
Nae love bides deeper i' the heart,
There's nane that lasts as lang:
Clear as the ever burning light
O' some bright beacon flame,
Through langest nights, through drearest hours,
It sparkles aye the same.

I'll ne'er forget that mither yet
At Aberdeen awa'—
Quo' she, "Ye've maybe seen my son
That's in America?"
His een were blue, his hair it hung
In yellow ringlets doun—
Ye wadna see a lad like him
In a' the country roun'.

"And kindly letters lang he sent,
That aye brought joy to me;
They cam as gowden glints o' light
Come owre the flow'ry lea;
Till ance we heard he wasna weel—
What ailed they didna say—
An' then we've got naeither word
For mony a weary day.

167
"Ae langsome night I dreamed a dream
   I thought I saw his face,
An' unco fowk were gather'd round,
   And in an unco place;
They laugh'd, they sang, and blithely danc'd
   Wi' muckle mirth and glee
But aye there cam' an unco lass
   Between my son an' me.

"But if he's dead or if he's wed,
   O tell me a' ye ken;
I've dree'd the warst and hoped the best—
   Ay, owre an' owre again!
An' aft the saut tears blind my een,
   An' aft my heart's been sair,
To think that e'er a bodie's ain
   Would mind their ain nae mair.

"An' O, whaure'er his feet hae gane,
   Whate'er his luck has ben,
I'm sure he hasna met wi' freends
   Like them at Aberdeen.
O, speak a kindly word o' them,
   An' maybe blithe he'll be
To listen to your frendly crack,
   An' think o' them an' me.

O, wanderers frae your native land,
   How can ye bear to see
The sunlight o' a mither's love
   Grow dim on memory's e'e?
O bask ye in its kindly rays,
   An' fan its fervid flames
There's nae love like a mither's love
   This side the hame o' hames!
THE WIFE O' WEINSBERG.

ADAPTED FROM THE GERMAN OF BURGER.

GIN I kent whaur Weinsberg was,
That toun o' muckle fame,
Whaur Woman's worth the brightest blooms
In ilka dainty dame;
I'd choose a wife to cheer my life
An mak' the place my hame!

Langsyne King Conrad led his ranks,
As ancient legends say,
An' set them doun by Weinsberg toun
In a' their fierce array;
Wi' axe and spear an' warlike gear
They battled nicht an' day.

For weeks they never closed an e'e,
But foucht wi' micht an' main;
The air was black wi' stoure and wrack,
The arrows fell like rain;
The Weinsberg folk withstood the shock
An' bauldly held their ain.

Till worn at last wi' wastrife war
Hope glimmer'd laigh an' dim,
An' mauchtless hands let fa' the sword
An' want glower'd gaunt an' grim;
They sought for peace frae Conrad's grace,
An' mercy begg'd frae him!
The king he swore a fearsome aith,—
    An' awesome king was he,—
That ilka man an' mither's son
    O' high or low degree,
Baith auld and young, he'd hae them hung
    Upon the gallows tree!

O mony hearts that day were sad,
    An' cheeks were blanch'd wi' fear!
An' mony a weary, weary e'e
    Let fa' the saut, saut tear!
For scorn an' scaith an' shamefu' death
    Are unco hard to bear!

A Weinsberg wife whase wedded life
    But aucht days joy had seen,
Set out wi' courage gleaming through
    The love-licht o' her een;
Alane she stood for womanhood
    Before the king—a queen!

She pled the weary women's cause,
    In words baith fair an' fain,
Since for the men sae scant o' grace
    Their prayers had been in vain,
An' moved his heart to tak' their part
    An' save what was their ain.

An' forth the royal mandate ran,
    That by his high decree
The wives micht tak' their treasures out
    Whate'er their gear may be;
"The bauld and brave should serve an' save
    The women-folk," said he.
What stir there was in Weinsberg toun!
What words o' joy they spak'!
As ane by ane each wife was seen
Her man upon her back!
An' out the road each took her load
Like peddler wi' a pack.

Each lad to his ain lass he clung;
The callants to their mithers;
The lassies blithely bore alang,
Their wee, wee bits o' brithers;
Maids found a mate, for bach'lors blate
Had cuist aside their swithers.

King Conrad glower'd amaz'd to see
The triumph on its way;
"Our royal word shall stand," said he,
"Let come or gang what may,
An' on my life the Weinsberg wife
Has fairly won the day!"

O tell me now whaur Weinsberg lies,
That toun o' muckle fame,
Whaur Woman's worth the brichest blooms
In ilka dainty dame,
I'll choose a wife to crown my life,
An' mak' the place my hame!
THE DOMINIE AND THE BETHERAL.

The Dominie sat and the Betheral sat,
And stirr'd round their toddy wi' glee:
"A bonnie-like scrape," the Dominie said—
"An unco-like scrape," said he.
"I wonder how fowk canna gang the right gate
As doucely as you an' me.

"O wha would hae thought that the bonnie young Laird,
Sae modest an' winsome an' braw,
Would e'er lost his wits wi' a jaud o' a lass
An' run wi' the hizzie awa'?
An' broken the heart o' his father, the Laird,
An' madden'd the Lady an' a'.

"An' yet wha can say that it's ill he has done?
Though youth is aft foolish an' fain;
It's little o' joy that the blithest can get
In this warld o' trouble an' pain;
An' a burden o' care grows lighter, they say,
When a lad has a lass o' his ain.

"I've skelpit the bairns an' tutor'd them wee!
These thirty lang winters an' three;
An' fient the ae glint o' a happy bit blink
Has ever ance open'd on me,
Till my heart's grown as sour an' my banes are as cauld
As the rungs o' a fusionless tree.

172
"An' aften at night when sleep winna come
I lie an' I gaunt an' I grane;
An' the wind answers back wi' a sough i' the lum
Like somebody making a mane;
An' I wish that the years would tak' wings an' flee back,
An' I was a laddie again.

"O then wi' a weel-faur'd hizzie like Jean,
I'd awa' to the land o' the free,
An' bask ilka day in the light o' her smiles
An' the bonnie blithe blinks o' her e'e;
An' the carking cares o' this wark-o'-day warl,
Would never ance settle on me.

"Forbye," the Dominie wisely said,
As he smack'd and smack'd at a sip,—
"The lass was right when she stuck to the lad,—
She was wise that keepit the grip;
They seldom get twice the chance o' a lad
If ever they let him slip.

"An' the lad did weel when he stuck to the lass,—
A braw strappin' quean an' a trim;—
She hasna left ane in the parish, I wat,
Sae clean an' sae straught in the limb;
Nae wonder I think on her beauty an' grace,
Nae wonder I wish I was him.

"But bide till the bairns come thrangin' around—
For poor fowk never hae few—
Like a cleckin o' birds a' scraighin' for meat,
An' ilka ane gapin' its mou':
Poor Donald will think o' the fool that he was,
An' wish he was single, I trow."
Then the Dominie laugh'd and the Betheral laugh'd,
    As if they would never have done.
When one piped loud the other piped loud,
    Like chaffinches whistling in June;
When one squeak'd low the other squeak'd low,
    Like two old fiddles in tune.

Then the Dominie finished his wandering speech,
    And said with a flash in his eye:
"O bide till a fortnight has sober'd them down,
    An' bide till the fever gae by,—
The lad will be back to his father again
    An' Jean will be milking the kye.

"Cauf-love's weel kent as a canny complaint
    That bides i' the heart nae mair
Than the bonnie bit blink when a sunshiny shower
    Gars a rainbow glow i' the air;
It's up like a flash an' awa' in a wink,
    As if it had never been there.

"But here's to oursel's! May the comfort that comes
    Frae a drap o' the barley bree
Aye cheer up our hearts in this warld o' change,
    Whatever the changes may be:
Be they beddings, or burials, or flittings, or feasts,
    They're a' ane to you an' to me."
THE AMERICANIZED SCOT; OR,

JEM WILSON AND THE QUEEN.

JEM WILSON was siccar, Jem Wilson was dour,
Jem never let anything slip;
Through thick an’ through thin, through storm and through stoure,
Jem Wilson he keepit the grip.
Though he dwelt mony years in the wilds o’ the West,
Where the prairie spreads bonnie and green,
He ne’er shook the auld yird frae his feet like the rest,
For Jem couldna gae back on the Queen!

“I ken na how fowk can be ae thing this day
And anither the morn,’” said he,
“But fools like a cheenge, an’ fowks say their say,
And they winna be guidit by me;
Some chields turn out bauld Republican loons,
And forget what their forebears hae been,
But there’s heads that’s ordained to be wearers o’ crowns,
And I canna gae back on the Queen!”

175
Some lauch'd at his notions, some pitied his plicht,
Jem cared na for daffin or jeers,
Some said that his mind would let in the daylicht
In the course o' a dizzen o' years.
But the days slippit by and his heart beat in truth,
To a lady he never had seen;
He forgot the maist feck o' the frends o' his youth,
But he aye keepit mind o' the Queen!

Some said that the day when he left his auld hame
Was the day he gaed back on them a';
How the auld country fowk and their ways like a dream,
Were worth naebody's notice ava;
How the present is more than the past, and a man
Is more than the laddie he's been;
Jem stood like a rock where his childhood began!
Jem stuck like a clam by the Queen!

When ithers gaed wud in political war,
An' grappled in fiery debate,
Jem sat like a boulder on bleak Lochnagar,
As lifeless as meat on a plate.
Wi' ithers the sky was aft murky an' black,
Wi' Jem it was calm and serene,
They dwelt in the wrack o' the hurricane's track,
Jem bask'd in the grace o' the Queen.

When billies fu' pawkily hinted that Jem,
Would mak' a grand Shirra or Mayor;
How the fowk were juist waiting for stalwarts like him,
To keep the young State in repair.
"Ye 'll hae to keep waiting," said Jem, "if that's so,
But ye needna blaw stoure in my een,
Come weal or come woe wherever I go,
Till death I'll be leal to the Queen!"

At last—wha can tell what fortune or fate,
Will some day bring as our shares,—
Some far awa' freend had left an estate,
An' Jem—he was ane o' the heirs!
But the law o' the State sae craftily stood,
Jem couldna lay hands on a preen,
Till he swore aff allegiance to a' royal blood,
An' save us! especially the Queen!

Poor Jem never dream'd that the time would come round
To test what his metal was worth;—
How sudden his braggin' was a' empty sound
When he gaed to inherit the earth
He ran an' he swore—on the Bible he swore—
Wi' a terrible gleam in his een,—
Jem Wilson was subject to princes no more,
Renouncing forever the Queen!—

But the warst o' t was this, when Jem reached the spot,
Wi' mony lang mile o' a tramp,
Twa sandy bit hillocks stood guard owre a lot
That measured ten acres o' swamp!
The crap o' mosquitoes an' puddocks was grand,
But never a leaf that was green,
A neuk o' a desert poor Jem had in hand,
In exchange for the loss o' the Queen!
Now friends tak' a thocht and keep mind in your mirth,
Though we laugh at the frailty o' Jem,
When the Queen gets a chance o' some neuk o' the earth
She winna be speerin' at him.
When we vow that we'll stick by the things that we like,
Juist think what the vanish'd has been,
Fond fancies aft fade like the snow aff a dyke,
As fickle as Jem wi' the Queen!
THE ROYAL SCOT.

"The friends thou hast and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel."

—Shakespeare.

WHEN through the mist o' vanish'd years
The past shines bright an' bonnie, O!
The gowden glow the vision wears
I hardly share 't wi' ony, O!
But there is ane, fu' crouse an' keen,
I like to mak' the sharer, O!
His honored name's weil kent to fame—
The leal MacGregor Crerar, O!
I ken there's Duncan Crerar, O!
Ah, then, there's Duncan Crerar, O!
The freend I've got 's a Royal Scot—
The noble Duncan Crerar, O!

I canna bide the bleezin' halls,
The haunts o' haverin' asses, O!
Whaur senseless fools at blithesome balls
Are oxterin' at the lasses, O!
I'd rather gae whaur I could hae
A joy serenely dearer, O!
Some cozy place whaur, face to face,
I'd sit and crack wi' Crerar, O!
There's worth in Duncan Crerar, O
There's mirth in Duncan Crerar, O!
There's hamely sense, without pretence,
In dainty Duncan Crerar, O!

179
When Memory spreads her wandering wings,
An' Crerar tells his stories, O!
And bright in graphic grandeur brings
Fair Scotland's glens an' corries, O!
The heather hills, the wimplin' rills,
In fancy's e'e flash fairer, O!
Ilk hallowed place, an' form, an' face,
Come at the call o' Crerar, O!
  He's rare! MacGregor Crerar, O!
  God spare MacGregor Crerar, O!
  He cracks sae fine that Auld Lawnsyne
  Is here again wi' Crerar, O!

What couthy kirns! What gatherings blithe!
What partings, sad and tender, O!
What light an' shade thegither kythe
In panoramic splendor, O!
What glowing health! What wondrous wealth
  O' life each seems the bearer, O!
How brisk and bright in living light
They dwell wi' Duncan Crerar, O!
  There 's heart in Duncan Crerar, O!
  There 's art in Duncan Crerar, O!
  The Scottish men frae hill an' glen
  Live in the brain o' Crerar, O!

When kirkyard tales come in his head,
The light grows dim an' dimmer, O!
The dead claes rustle round the dead;
The ghaist lights glance an' glimmer, O!
The mouldy banes, the sculptured stanes
  Are tragic wonders rarer, O!
Than actors' arts, whose weirdest parts
  Are no a match to Crerar, O!
What skill! MacGregor Crerar, O!
To thrill! MacGregor Crerar, O!
Play-actor fowks are maistly gowks
Compared wi' Duncan Crerar, O!

Sometimes in verse his polished pen
Flows on in stately measure, O!
While round his board the brightest men
Confab in princely pleasure, O!
How fine's the sight when genius bright
Illumes each royal sharer, O!
The brain and to gue o' auld an' young
Catch fire frae Duncan Crerar, O!
How bland is Duncan Crerar, O!
How grand is Duncan Crerar, O!
It's wealth to clasp, in kinship's grasp,
The noble freends o' Crerar, O!

But weak's my Muse to chant his praise,
Or sing his graces mony, O!
Weel worthy he o' loftier lays
Than aught frae me, his crony, O!
As years row by, an' age comes nigh,
I'll stick by him the nearer, O!
For few there be that pleases me
Like rare MacGregor Crerar, O!
He's fine! MacGregor Crerar, O!
He's mine! MacGregor Crerar, O!
I've straiked my loof in freendship's proof
Wi' few like Duncan Crerar, O!
Auld Scotland's bairns hae wandered far
Owre sea an' land an' river, O!
'Neath Southern Cross or Western star,
They're Scots at heart forever, O!
By land or sea, whaure'er they be,
The auld hame seems the fairer, O!
There's thousands ten o' Scottish men
That feel like Duncan Crerar, O!
I'm wi' ye! Duncan Crerar, O!
Here's to ye! Duncan Crerar, O!
Abroad or hame, Scots bless the name
O' loyal Duncan Crerar, O!
THE WANDERER.

LANGSYNE on the hills,
Where the blaeberrys grew,
And the laverock sang sweetly
Far up in the blue,
Ilka day glided by,
Like a lang happy dream,
Till I heard my fond mither cry,
"Jamie, come hame!
Jamie, come hame!
 Jamie, come hame!
You're lang awa' wandering,
 Jamie, come hame!"

In a far awa' land,
Through the din o' the years,
In the sunshine o' hopes,
And the shadow o' fears,
I hear a sweet echo
Still calling my name—
And it's, "Oh, but you're lang awa'.
 Jamie, come hame!
Jamie, come hame!
 Jamie, come hame!
You're lang awa' wandering,
 Jamie, come hame!"

183
Though life's fondest fancies
   Are idle and vain,
And my feet may ne'er tread
   The red heather again;
In the land o' the leal,
   When I catch the first gleam,
May I hear the glad welcome,
   "Jamie, come home!
Jamie, come hame!
Jamie, come hame!
You're lang awa' wandering,
   Jamie, come hame!"
NOTES.

Page 9.

In 1861, at the outbreak of the American Civil War, the 79th Highlanders, headquarters in New York City, consisted of about 300 men, divided into six companies, and attached to the New York State Militia. The Highland uniform, or kilt, was worn. The undress, or fatigue, uniform consisted of caps, blue jackets and Cameron tartan trousers. Their services were among the first offered to the government, and on May 13th the formal acceptance was made. Early in June, the regiment, recruited to nearly 900, proceeded to Washington. From such reports as are in the office of the Adjutant-General at Albany, it appears that there were enrolled in the regiment, from May, 1861, to May, 1864, 1,374 men.

Of these, there were killed in battle or died of wounds or disease, 190; discharged, by reason of disability caused by wounds or sickness and other causes, 747; mustered out May, 1864, 244; transferred, resigned, and dismissed previous to May, 1864, 76; term of enlistment not completed, 117; total 1,374.

The second period of the regiment's service during the Civil War dates from June, 1864, to July, 1865, during which period 609 men were attached to the regiment. Though participating in the Siege of Petersburg and the final assault on the Confederate works there, the casualties were slight. The final mustering out of the service of the government occurred on July 14, 1865.

The regiment participated in the following engagements:

1861.—July 18, Blackburn's Ford, Virginia.
    July 21, Bull Run, Virginia.
    September 11, Lewinsville, Virginia.
    September 25, Lewinsville, Virginia.

185
1862.—January 1, Port Royal Ferry, South Carolina.
   May 28, Pocataligo, South Carolina.
   June 3–4, James Island, South Carolina.
   June 16, Secessionville, South Carolina.
   August 21, Kelly's Ford, Virginia.
   September 1, Chantilly, Virginia.
   September 14, South Mountain, Maryland.
   September 17, Antietam, Maryland.
   December 13–14, Fredericksburg, Virginia.

1863.—June–July 4, Vicksburg, Mississippi.
   July 10–17, Jackson, Mississippi.
   October 10, Blue Springs, Tennessee.
   November 16, Campbell's Station, Tennessee.
   November 17–December 5, Siege of Knoxville, Tennessee.
   November 29, Defense of Fort Sanders, Tennessee.

1864.—January 21, Strawberry Plains, Tennessee.
   January 22, Between Strawberry Plains and Knoxville,
      Tennessee.
   May 6–7, Wilderness, Virginia.
   May 9–13, Spottsylvania, Virginia.
   October 27, Hatcher's Run, Virginia.

1865.—March 25, Fort Stedman, Virginia.
   April 2, Final assault on Petersburg, Virginia.

Page 14.

The march over the Cumberland Mountains occurred in September, 1863. The division of the Union Army consisted of the 79th New York (Highlanders), 8th and 27th Michigan, 35th and 36th Massachusetts, 11th New Hampshire, 51st New York, 45th Pennsylvania, and Benjamin's Battery, United States Artillery. The division formed a part of the Ninth Army Corps, commanded by General Burnside. Brigadier-General David Morrison, Colonel 79th New York (Highlanders), commanded the brigade to which the Highlanders were attached.
NOTES.  187

Page 19.

The campaign in Eastern Tennessee began on September 21, 1863. The first encounter with the Confederate forces occurred at Blue Springs on October 10th, which resulted in completely routing the rebels. The Union Division moved southward and took up winter quarters at Lenoir. The Confederates advanced from the South in great force and the Union division withdrew to Knoxville. A sharp engagement occurred at Campbell's Station on November 16th, when the Highlanders successfully held in check the Confederate cavalry.

Page 24.

The Siege of Knoxville began on November 17th. The principal defensive work was a fort half a mile west of the city. The defenders of this chief work were Benjamin's Battery, Company E, 2d United States Artillery, part of Buckley's and Romer's Batteries, Volunteer Artillery and 2d Michigan Infantry on the flank. Two companies of the 29th Massachusetts Infantry and the 79th New York (Highlanders) were stationed in the Northwest bastion of the fort. The cannonade from the Confederate artillery, chiefly aimed at the fort, was continued almost incessantly from November 18th till November 28th.

Page 29.

The final assault on the defenses of Knoxville occurred on Sunday morning, November 29, 1863. General Longstreet's entire division, numbering over 8,000 men, was sent against the main bastion of Fort Sanders, where the Highlanders were stationed. The repulse of the Confederates was complete, with a total loss of 129 men killed, 458 wounded and 226 prisoners. Three battle-flags were captured by the Highlanders. In referring to the assault on Fort Sanders, the Southern historian, Pollard, in his "Third Year of the War," says: "In this terrible ditch the dead were piled eight or ten deep. Never, excepting at Gettysburg, was there in the history of the war a disaster adorned with the glory of such devout courage as Longstreet's repulse at Knoxville."
NOTES.

Page 40.

Albyn, an ancient name applied to Caledonia, used by Campbell in "Gertrude of Wyoming."

Page 44.

Noran Water rises among the Grampian Hills in the north of Forfarshire, flows south and east through that county about 20 miles, and joins the South Esk near the ancient burgh of Brechin.

Page 52.

Angus Rankin was Pipe-Major of the 79th Regiment (Highlanders) National Guard, State of New York, when the regiment was mustered out of the service of the State in 1876. He died in 1880.

Page 59.

Robert Buchanan, the well-known British poet and most genial and variously gifted man, visited America in 1884-85.

Page 62.

James Fleming, the celebrated Scottish athlete, was born at Tullymet, Perthshire, in 1840, and died at Melbourne, Australia, in 1887. For more than twenty years he was a competitor at the principal athletic gatherings in Scotland, and some of his performances have not been surpassed by any other athlete. He visited America in 1871 and was received with much popular favor. The following are the records made by him in some of the games: At Blair Castle Grounds, Blair Athole, in 1869, he put the 22 lb. stone backward and forward 38 feet, 7 inches; at Glenisla Gathering he put the 28 lb. stone 33 feet, 8 inches; at Stonehaven, in 1874, he put the 16 lb. stone 46 feet, 6 inches; at Tullymet, in 1877, he threw the 16 lb. hammer, standing at the mark, 125 feet, 8 inches; at Stonehaven, in 1876, he threw 56 lb. by the ring, standing at the mark, 26 feet 8 inches. He also won many prizes at running and leaping and was one of the best all-around athletes of which there is any authentic record.
Page 71.

One morning during the sojourn of the Highlanders at Port Royal Ferry, South Carolina, a number of negro refugees presented themselves at the end of the causeway, on the opposite side of the Coosaw River, and by signs indicated their desire to be brought over. Lieutenant Dingwall and a few others of the Highlanders jumped into a boat, captured only a few days before from the enemy's side, and rowed across the three hundred feet of rapid current. Thirteen negroes were found, men, women, and children. As the boat was about to push off the enemy discovered what was going on, and the guard sounded a general alarm. The Union side was equally alert, and the refugees were safely landed on the side of freedom. The gratitude of the negroes was unbounded. This incident occurred nearly a year before President Lincoln's Proclamation of Emancipation.

Page 77.

The incident related in the verses occurred as described. The assault on the Confederate works at Secessionville, James Island, was made by General Stevens' division, consisting of the 8th Michigan, 7th Connecticut, 28th Massachusetts, 48th New York, 79th (Highlanders) New York, and the 100th Pennsylvania regiments. The division advanced during the night in the order named. The 8th Michigan and the 79th New York reached the works and took possession of the batteries, but were recalled on account of the other regiments failing to advance to their support. The two brothers referred to, William and Robert Tofts, were members of the 79th. One was killed during the battle; the other, returning to look for his brother's body, was also killed.

The Charleston Mercury, in its account of the battle, referring to the Highlanders, used this language: "It was left to the valiant Paladins of the North, to the brave 79th Highlanders, to test the virtue of unadulterated cold steel on our Southern nerves; but they terribly mistook their foe, for they were rolled back in a tide of blood. Thank God! Lincoln has, or had, only one 79th regiment, for there is only a remnant left to tell the tale. The soldiers who can make a charge, and those who can stand it, their conditions being equal, are the parties to win a war."

The total loss of the Highlanders in this engagement, in killed and wounded, was 110, about one-fourth of the strength of the regiment at that time.

Page 85.

James Clement Moffat was a native of Gallowayshire, Scotland, where he was born on May 30, 1811. From his tenth to his sixteenth year he was a shepherd on the hills of Galloway. He learned the printer's trade in Edinburgh, and emigrated to America in 1833. Principal Maclean, of Princeton, induced him to enter the Princeton College, where he graduated in 1835. For over fifty years he was esteemed as one of the most eminent scholars and teachers in that institution. In 1888 he was made Professor Emeritus. He was a gifted and prolific writer. He died at Princeton, New Jersey, June 7, 1890.
GLOSSARY.

The a in Scottish words, except when forming a diphthong, or followed by an e mute after a single consonant, sounds like the broad English a in wall. The Scottish diphthongs ea, ei, and ie sounds like ee in English; ch and gh final in Scottish words have always the guttural sound as in the German; d and g final after n are never sounded. The French u, a sound which often occurs in the Scottish language, is generally written oo or ui. The English sound of oo is marked ou in Scottish. The Scottish diphthong a e, always sounds like the French é acute.

A

A', all.
Aboon, above.
Ae, one.
Aff', off.
Afore, before.
Aft, often.
Ahint, behind.
Ain, own.
Aith, oath.
Air, early.
Airt, direction, point of the compass.
Amang, among.
Amaist, almost.

An', and.
Ance, once.
Ane, one
Aneuch, enough.
Antrin, occasional.
Auld, old.
Auld-farrant, old-fashioned.
Ava, at all.
Awa', away.
Awesome, frightful.

B

Ba', ball.
Bairns, children.
Baith, both.
Ballant, ballad.
Banes, bones.
Bannock, a flat, round cake.
Bannin, swearing.
Bauchles, old shoes.
Bauks, beams.
Bauld, bold.
Baubee, half-penny.
Ben, the spence, or parlor.
Betheral, a church officer or sexton.
Beuk, book.
Bickerin, running.
Bide, wait.
Billie, fellow.
Birdie, diminutive of bird.
Birselt, broiled.
Bittie, a small bit.
Bizzin, buzzing.
Blate, bashful.
Blatter, to start off suddenly.
Blaw, to blow.
Blether, to talk idly.
Blink, to shine by fits.
Blobs, blisters.
Bluid, blood.
Bodie, a person.
Bogle, a spectre.
Bonnie, beautiful, handsome.
Bonnilie, beautifully.
Brae, slope of a hill.
Braid, broad.
Braw, fine, gayly dressed.
Brawly, finely, heartily.
Brither, brother.
Brods, boards.
Buckie, a sea-shell, a refractory person.

Buller, a loud noise.
Buirdly, stout, broad built.
Bumbees, wild bees.
Burnie, a streamlet.
Bush, to dress.
Byke, a nest or habitation.
Bykit, hived or gathered together.

Ca’, call.
Caber, a young tree after being cut down.
Caller, fresh.
Cam’, came.
Cankert, ill-tempered.
Canna, cannot.
Cannie, gentle, dexterous.
Cantrip, a trick, a spell.
Canty, lively, cheerful.
Carl, an old man.
Catwittit, hairbrained.
Cauft-love, first love.
Cauld, cold.
Cauldripe, susceptible to cold.
Chafts, the jaws.
Chiel, a young man.
Chirkit, grinding the teeth.
Chow, to chew.
Chuckie, a hen.
Claes, clothes.
Clash, idle talk.
Cleeds, to clothe.
Cleckin, a brood of birds.
Clinkit, denoting alertness.
Clocking, hatching.
Cloitet, to fail or sit down.
Cog, a wooden dish.
Coof, a blockhead.
Couthy, kind, loving.
Cowpit, tumbled.
Crack, conversation.
Craig, the throat.
Craw, to crow.
Creeshie, greasy.
Crokonition, destruction.
Cronach, a mournful song.
Croon, to sing.
Crouse, cheerful, courageous.
Cruds, curds.
Crusie, a lamp.

D
Dacklin, sticking.
Daffin, merry.
Daft, giddy, foolish.
Daunter, to wander.
Daur, to dare.
Daurna, dare not.
Dawted, fondled, caressed.
Dearie, a sweetheart.
Deave, to am Ry.
Dee, to die.
Deil, the devil.
Ding, to overcome.
Dinna, do not.
Dirl, a vibration.
Doilt, a stupid person.
Doitet, confused.
Dominie, a schoolmaster.
Dool, sorrow.
Doos, doves.
Dosent, stupid.
Douce, sober, prudent.

Down, down.
Dour, stubborn.
Dowff, melancholy.
Dowie, sad.
Drammack, meal and water.
Drap, drop.
Dree, to suspect, to endure.
Drech, tedious, lingering.
Dreep, drippings.
Droukit, drenched.
Drouth, thirst, draught.
Drucken, drunken.
Drumliiz, muddy, troubled.
Dub, a standing pool.
Duds, rags, clothes.
Dumfounded, astonished.
Dune, done.
Duntin, beating.

E
Ee or e'e, the eye.
Een, the eyes.
Eerie, haunted, dreading spirits.

Fa', fall.
Fae, foe.
Fash, trouble.
Fashious, troublesome.
Fecht, fight.
Feckless, useless.
Feckly, mostly.
Fegs, an exclamation of surprise.
Fient, never.
Fit, foot.
GLOSSARY.

Fluff, flutter
Face, fly,
Flug, to frighten.
Flit, to change, to remove.
Flypin, hanging loosely.
Forbye, besides.
Forfoughten, fatigued.
Fu', or fou, full, drunk.
Fusion, power.
Fusionless, powerless.
Fyke, trifling cares.

G

Gae, to go.
Galore, plenty.
Gaed, went.
Gane, gone.
Gaunt, going.
Gangrel, a wandering person.
Gar, to compel.
Gate, way, manner, road.
Gaunt, to yawn, to long for.
Gauckie, a thoughtless person.
Gear, riches, goods.
Ghaist, a ghost.
Gie, to give.
Gied, given.
Gin, if.
Girnin, grinning, fault-finding.
Glaiket, inattentive, foolish.
Glint, a glance, a transient gleam.
Gloamin, evening.
Glower, to stare.
Glunch, to frown.
Gowd, gold.
Gowk, term of contempt, the cuckoo.

Graith, accoutrements.
Grane, to groan.
Grat, to weep, to shed tears.
Grip, to take hold of.
Gruesome, loathsome, grim.
Guffaw, burst of laughter.
Gude, the Supreme Being.
Guid, good.
Guidman, husband or head of a family.

H

Ha', hall.
Hae, have.
Haen, had.
Haena, have not.
Haggis, a kind of a pudding boiled in the stomach of a sheep.
Hale, whole.
Halesome, wholesome.
Hallan, a partition in a house.
Hame, home.
Hameowre, rustic, homely.
Hankit, tightened.
Hap, to cover.
Harigalds, heart, liver and lights of an animal.
Harl, to drag roughly.
Haud, to hold.
Haudin, holding or habitation.
Haverel, foolish person.
Haugh, low-lying land.
Hersel', herself.
Het, hot.
Heeze, to raise up.
Heigh, high.
Glossary.

Hirplin, creeping, walking crazily.

Hizzie, a young woman.

Howe, a hollow or dale.

Howff, rendezvous.

Hunkers, haunches.

Hurdies, the buttocks.

Hurlkin, drawing the body together.

I

I, in.

Ilk, each.

Ilka, every.

Ither, other.

Ingans, onions.

It lane, alone.

Itself, itself.

J

Jaud, a giddy young woman.

Jaw, rush or splash of water.

Jee, jelly.

Jockie-blindly, blindman's buff.

Joyfu’, joyful.

Jimpy, small.

K

Kail, colewort, a kind of broth.

Kaimed, combed.

Ken, to know.

Kent, known, knew.

Kimmer, a young woman.

Kintra, country.

Kittle, difficult, ticklish.

Kritled, tickled.

Kittlin, kitten.

Kirnin, searching.

Kowes, broom.

Kye, cows.

Kythe, to be manifest.

L

Laddie, diminutive of lad.

Laigh, low.

Laird, a land owner.

Laith, loath.

Lang, long.

Lang-nebbit, long-beaked.

Langsome, wearisome.

Langsyne, long since.

Lap, to leap.

Lassie, diminutive of lass.

Lave, the rest, the others.

Lear, learning.

Laverock, the skylark.

Lee-lang, live long.

Leeze, a phrase of congratulation.

Leal, loyal, true, faithful.

Lift, sky, firmament.

Lightsome, gladsome, cheerful.

Lilts, cheerful songs.

Linn, a cataract.

Lintie, the linnet.

Lo’e, love.

Loof, the open hand.

Loot, let.

Loun, a young fellow.

Loupin, leaping.

Loupit, leaped.

Lowse, to unloose.

Luckie, a designation given to an elderly woman.
GLOSSARY.

Lugs, ears.
Lum, the chimney.

M
Mair, more.
Mak, make.
Mane, moan.
Mauchtless, helpless.
Maun, must.
Maunna, must not.
Marrows, equals.
Mirk, dark.
Mither, mother.
Mools, earth.
Mony, many.
Mou, the mouth.
Moudywarts, moles.
Muckle, large.
Mummlet, muttered.
Mump, to mince.
Mysel', myself.

N
Na, no, not.
Nae, no, not any.
Naething, nothing.
Nane, none.
Neb, beak or bill.
Neuk, corner.
Nick, applied to the devil.
Nip, a small quantity.

O
O', of.
Ony, any.
Orra, useless, supernumerary.
Oursels, ourselves.
Owre, over.

Owreby, over at the other side.

P
Pang, to cram.
Pawky, cunning.
Pech, to breathe hard.
Peeries, spinning tops.
Plash, to strike water forcibly.
Ploy, a frolic.
Pock, a bag.
Pouch, a pocket.
Pow, poll.
Prick-the-louse, a tailor.
Preen, a pin.
Puckle, a small quantity.
Puddock, a frog.
Puir, poor.

Q
Quo', said.

R
Rantin, noisy mirth.
Rax, to stretch.
Reek, smoke.
Rift, to belch.
Rin, to run.
Rive, to tear.
Roose, to praise.
Row, to roll.
Rowth, plenty.
Rungs, pieces of wood.

S
Sab, sob.
Sae, so.
Saft, soft.
Sair, sore, much.
GLOSSARY.

Sairin, serving enough.
Scaith, harm.
Scalatch, a lubberly fellow.
Scatter, a splash as of mud.
Scowder, to toast hastily.
Scraigh, scream.
Sel, self.
Shaw, a wood.
Sic, such.
Siccan, such as.
Siccar, secure.
Siller, silver.
Sin, since.
Sin syne, since then.
Skelpit, to beat with the open hand.
Skelps, pieces, blows.
Skeugh, to move in a slanting direction.
Skirl, to shriek.
Skreid, a detached piece.
S'cyte, to slide, to slip.
Slocken, to slake, to quench.
Slack, loose, wrinkled.
Slee, skillful, dexterous.
Slowth'd, neglected.
Sma, small.
Snaw, snow.
Sough, a rushing sound.
Souter, a shoemaker.
Spak, to speak.
Spung, to spring violently.
Speel, climbing.
Speer, to ask, to inquire.
Spinks, meadow-pinks.
Splatches, blotches.
Sprauchele, to scramble.
Stammack, stomach.
Stappit, stopped, filled.
Stee, shut.
Steer, stir.
Siend, to leap.
Stieve, firm, compacted.
Stirk, a steer.
Stock, one whose limbs are stiffened by age.
Stoups, jugs.
Stour, dust in motion.
Strakit, stroked, smoothed.
Strappin, tall, handsome, vigorous.
Straught, straight.
Streikkit, stretched.
Swack, pliant, nimble.
Swat, sweated.
Swither, hesitation, wavering.
Syne, then.

T

Tae, one.
Taes, toes.
Tak, take.
Tattie-dooly, a scarecrow set in a potato field.
Tauld, told.
Tent, care, heed.
Teuch, tough.
Thae, these.
Thowé, a thaw.
Thrangen, thronging.
Throwither, confused.
Thravart, perverse, obstinate.
Throwed, twisted.
Thuddin, striking.
Til, to.
Tinkler, a wandering tinkler.
Tint, lost.
Tirr-wirrs, habitual complaints.
Tither, the other.
Tod or tod-lourie, the fox.
Toom, empty.
Tousie, dishevelled.
Trauchle, fatiguizing exertion.
Tryst, engagement.
Tummle, tumble.
Tyke, an odd or strange person.
Twa, two.
Twalmonth, twelve months.

U
Unco, strange.

V
Vaig, a vagrant.
Vera or Verra, very.
Vow, an interjection expressive of surprise.

W
Wa', wall.
Wad, would.
Waefu', woeful.
Waff, a puff.
Waft, weft.
Wame, the belly.
Wanworth, unworthy.
Warlock, wizard.
Warsle, wrestle.
Wastrife, wasting.
Wat, wet.
Waublin, unsteady motion.
Wauch, low, immoral.
Waught, a draught.
Wauken, awake.
Waur, worse.
Wean, child.
Weel, well.
Weel-faur'd, well favored.
Weel I wat, well I wot.
Werena, were not.
Wha, who.
Whaur, where.
Whazzlin, wheezing.
Wheesht, hush.
Whummle, turn over.
Wi', with.
Widdie, a rope made of twigs.
Wimplin, meandering.
Winna, will not.
Winsome, gay, attractive.
Wiss, wish.
Worn wea', passed away.
Wrang, wrong.
Wretch, wretch.
Wyte, blame.

Y
Yaird, garden.
Yek, itch.
Yekkie, itchy.
Yill, ale.
Yird, earth.
Yont, beyond.
Yourself, yourself.
Yule, Christmas.
Opinions of the Scottish Press on Mr. Kennedy's Poems.

"As the effusions of a Scot abroad, they truly, in their exquisite humor, original and rich thought, tender pathos and vivid description, remind the Caledonian of his country's Burns and Tannahill. We claim the author as Scotland's own, and stamp him at once a true exponent of her Doric language and her deep, poetic soul. Poems, songs and character sketches such as these are not to be met with every day. They are scarce indeed."—Border Advertiser.

"The pieces which we like the best are character sketches in the Caledonian Doric, which Mr. Kennedy employs with classic propriety."—Dumfries Standard.

"The reader cannot fail to be struck with the elegance of Mr. Kennedy's versification, his command of appropriate epithets, and his mastery of the Scottish dialect. His pieces are eminently original, and the tenderness and humor manifested in them will commend them to every lover of Scottish poetry."—Kelso Chronicle.

"He is a fine, kindly, pawky chiel, Mr. Kennedy, and it is pleasant to hear him sing, as if he were sitting under the gleaming eye of the Scottish lion, and not under the voluminous folds of the star-spangled banner."—Glasgow Herald.

"It is exceedingly gratifying to find that the Scottish Muse has in America so devoted and successful a wooer as Mr. Kennedy. He has clearly the real stuff in him. All the characteristics of true Scottish poetry—simplicity, tenderness, pathos and humor—will be found in his work."—Stirling Observer.

"His humorous and character sketches bristle with funny phrases and turns of thought. His love and pastoral pieces are especially successful."—Fifeshire Journal.
Opinions of the Scottish Press on Mr. Kennedy's Poems.

"He is a true poet, and handles the Scotch admirably."—Perthshire Advertiser.

"The pathetic and humorous sides of life are treated with equal ability. His songs have all the qualities for winning popular favor."—Perthshire Constitutional.

"His versification flows on, smooth and melodious, while his style is elastic and his muse versatile. With equal facility he describes the grotesque side of Scottish character, portrays natural scenery in vivid language, sings of the joys and sorrows of human life in strains of melting pathos, or provokes bursts of laughter with his genuine, pawky humor."—Dundee Weekly News.

"An unexpected treat in varied and flexible measure, stirring sentiment, and a command of the Doric at once easy and complete."—Dundee Advertiser.

"His compatriots in the Western States run no danger of forgetting their native land while they have in their midst a poet so well qualified to sing its praises."—Aberdeen Journal.

"Full of real humor, and written with an insight into human nature, and a power of catching and fixing the salient points of character."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"He has his share of the two leading qualities of Scottish poetry—humor and pathos."—Elgin Courant.

"Mr. Kennedy is in a high degree gifted with the true poetic faculty; and, like all poets, love for his fatherland is a distinguishing trait of his character, and a favorite fountain at which his muse drinks inspiration."—Northern Ensign.

"Excellent descriptive poetry; but it is in the humorous Scottish pieces that Mr. Kennedy is at his best."—Orkney Herald.